It has come to my attention that this regained popularity in recent weeks. As the author, I'm deeply humbled by the support in the form of reblogs and likes even despite the crass language. I'm not Lakota or from the areas of these tribes. I'm from a Pueblo in New Mexico (shout-out to the Pueblo camp at standing Rock!) And Navajo Nation. I made this post at s tumultuous time in my life when I had accrued so much capital and privilege in the white man's world. Back when these were working links, I was a community organizer that went into a post traumatic stress disorder episode while this post was getting popular 2 years ago when Standing Rock was still at camp. I ask folks to reblog this out of respect to the many people and messages passed that allows for campaigns like these to exist. I'll never know how much was raised but know that y'all were a part of something huge and important. That two years is not a long time and progress is like watching grass grow.

The basic premise of the Trolley Problem accepts that it is reasonable to live in a world where people get unavoidably thrown under the tracks by invisible powers that are never held accountable. Which makes it sort of meaningless as an ethics experiment, but really apt as a metaphor for the globalized capitalist hellscape whose tracks we are all currently tied to.

@professionalreblogs can you update on whether they're okay? Because that face shape looks like they might have some problems.

professionalreblogs Follow

Our professor bumped up our classes when we all started researching these freaks so here's what I've learned

They have bad eyesight, and poor running stamina, but otherwise they're one of the most hardy breeds and are known as the "bulldog of goats". They are great for both milk and meat production and apparently have an easier to digest milk than other dairy animals. They also are the "grandfather" to the goat breed Qahr, which is known as the most beautiful goat breed.

These are also apparently one of the most oldest goat breeds to survive for so long! They were originally from India before spreading to the Middle East (specifically to nomadic tribes) for being so hardy to most any climate. From their they were sent to Britan between the 1300s and 1500s where they bred like wild fire for having such good milk production as well as good meat for when they became old enough for slaughter

They also apparently don't have any known health problems correlated to the breed, but if not milked the females can get overloaded real quick since they produce quite a lot of milk for their size (which is one of the largest goat breeds as well!) Their skull is fairly small compared to their size but nothing is said for any health problems correlating to it.

Show bucks tend to have their ears docked, which pulls attention to their large nose, which is debated to either be for water storage or to attract mates! (We haven't gotten to there yet, but classmates are debating) they also have large horns that curve to the back, but many farmers "dehorn" animals to avoid injury.

Their tempermant is very calm and they're even kept as pets!

fireheartedkaratepup Follow

THANK YOU I tried looking it up and didn't find anything nearly as comprehensive.

biggest-gaudiest-patronuses

You're telling me there is an ancient, miraculously indestructible breed of goat

- who are the ancestors of the most beautiful goats in the world
- and who in their own lifespans undergo a mystic transformation from fairy-like imps to eerie hag goddesses wandering around like terrible forgotten Old Gods of the fields and forest
- and they are also the strangely abundant source of smooth white milk with unusual properties
- and the bargain for them remaining in our realm is that, upon coming of age, their ears and sometimes horns are stolen away by humans, for reasons unknown
- and in payment for this archaic ritual, their clan has flourished, healthy and hardy, spreading far and wide throughout the lands

Goat herders bargained with the fae for magic fairy goats, is what you're telling me.

cautionramen Follow

While this is all wonderful information Qahr isn't a breed of goat but rather the name of a Damascus goat that won the prize for most beautiful goat in the world back in 2008. You can't get a more beautiful breed of goat than this ^^ she is familiar with this flower. she knows the name of this flower. she declines to believe, however, that these are also dandelions

she does not believe these are the same plant. I tried to explain, and she thought I was either misinformed or lying. so I asked her what exactly did she think the yellow ones were called?

What in the world is the bi manifesto ? That anon is wildin lmaooo visibilityofcolor answered:

???? that's what i'm trying to think?? really what is that-- that sounds like a strange way to put some weird shit or whatever on bisexual people, like we have some manifesto and we're going around harassing folks--

queer-mothra Follow

I'm pretty sure people are referring to the The Bisexual Manifesto (1990) written by the Bay Area Bisexual Network (or something like that). The problem with people quoting it is that the very same manifesto which says don't assume bisexuality is binary and don't assume there are only two genders also says don't assume everyone has the same definition of bisexuality and (more or less) that bisexuals are not a monolith. It's so hypocritical that people only read half of the one page essay and ignored the entire other half.

queer-mothra Follow

I found an online transcription.

READ →

Fully transcribing The Bisexual Manifesto from: Anything That Moves: Beyond the Myths of Bisexuality (1990) The Bay Area...

THE BISEXUAL MANIFESTO

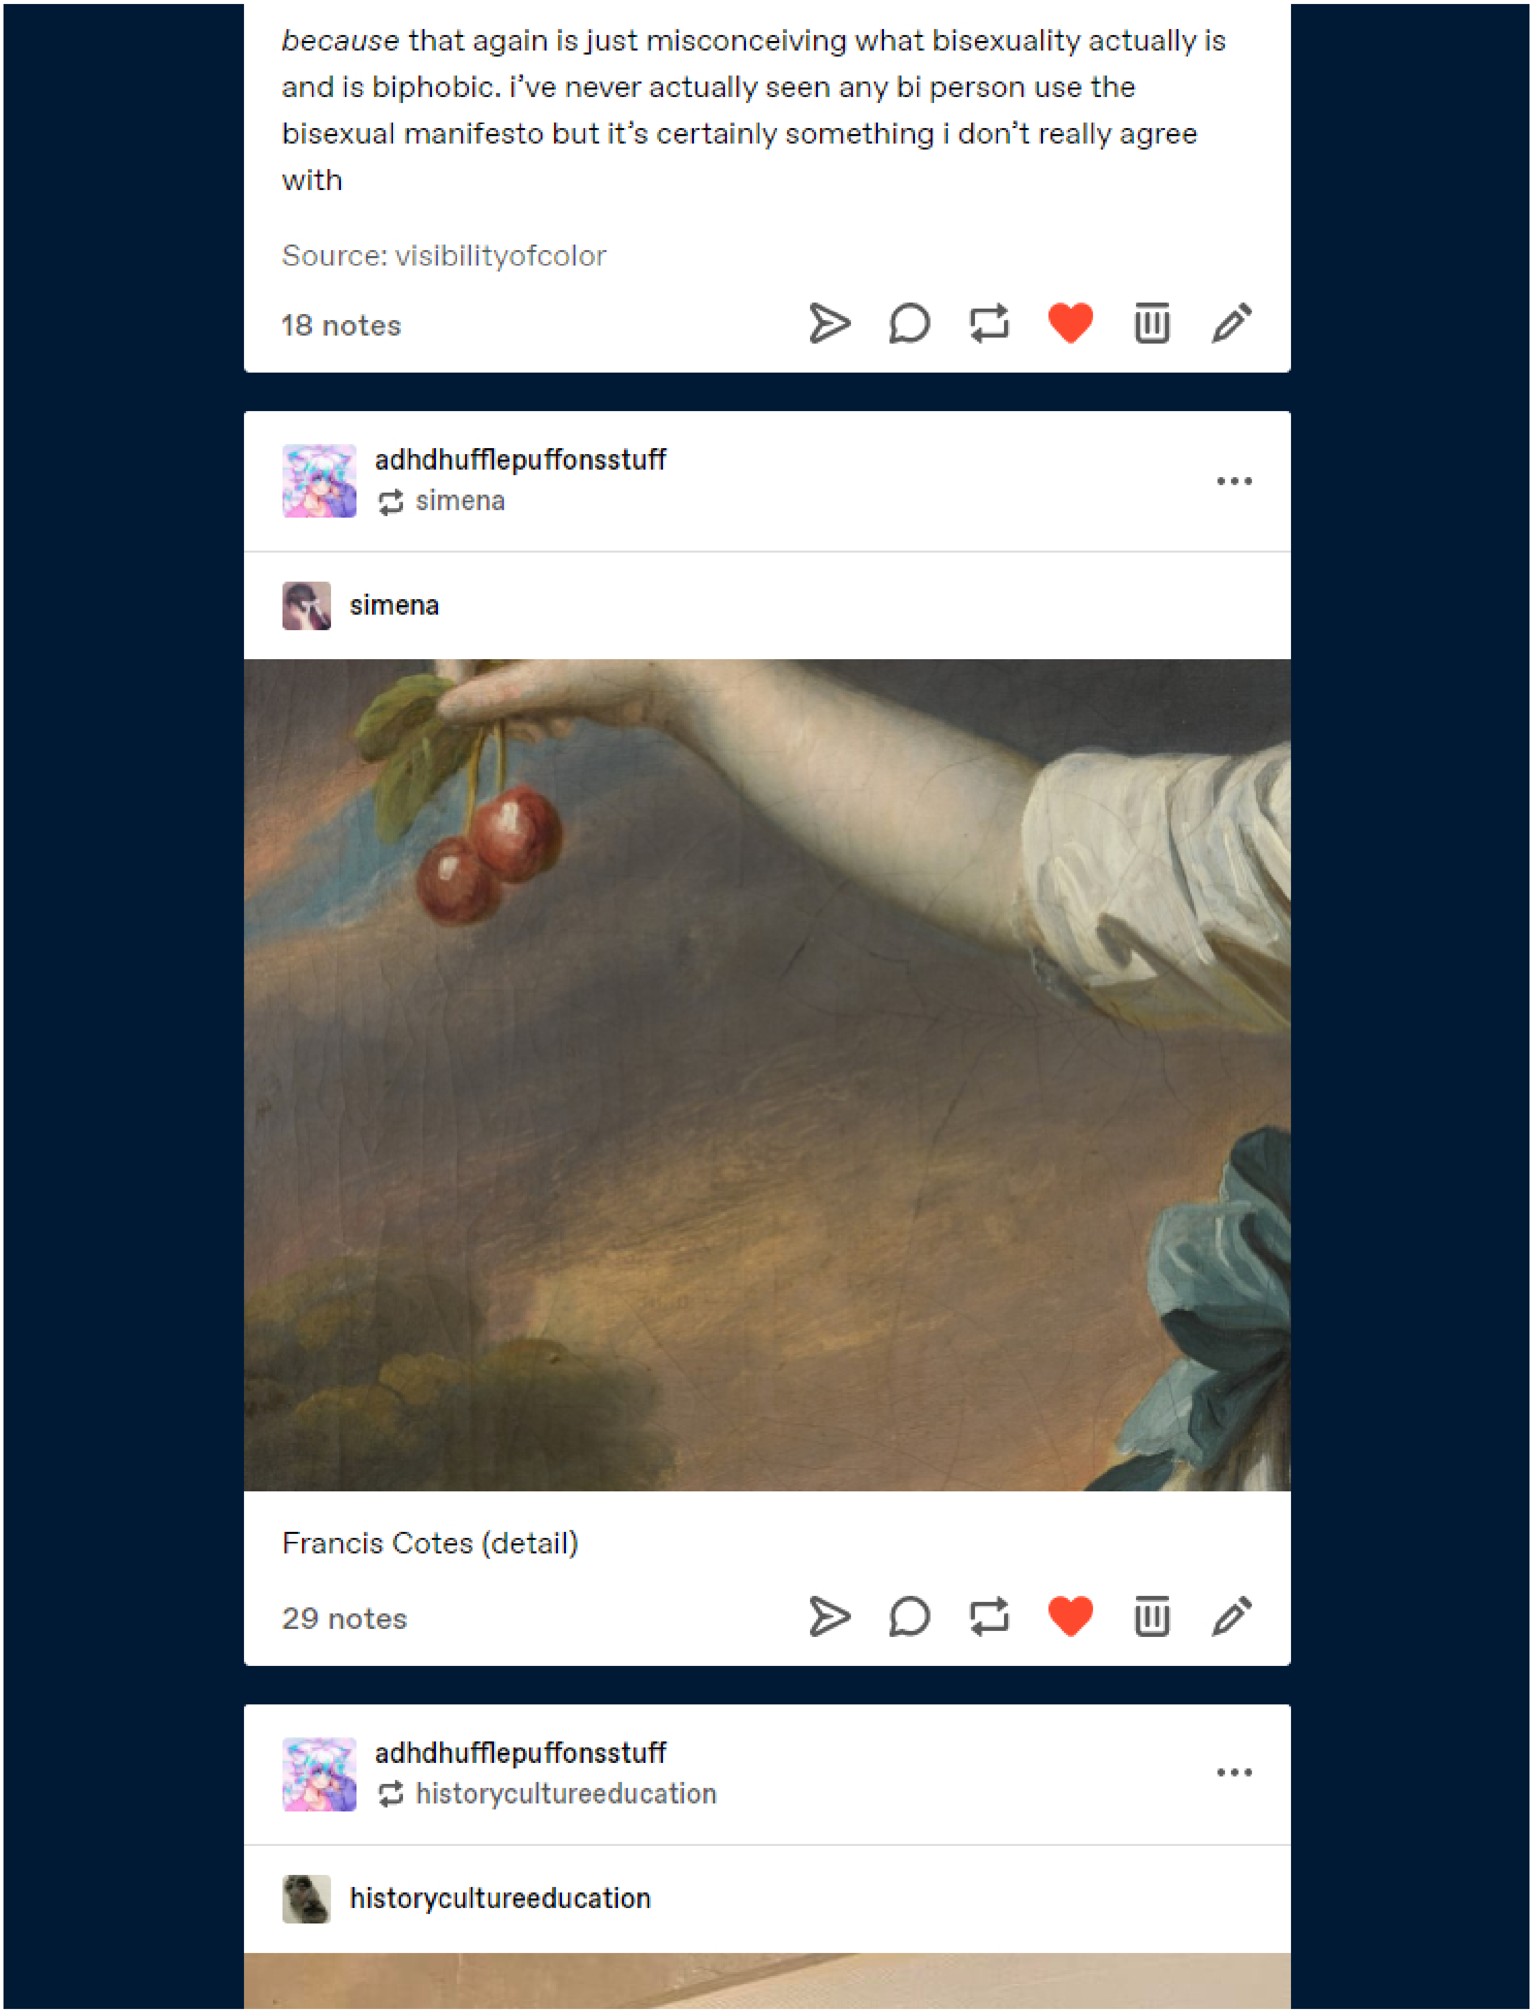
This is literally the next paragraph below the one people love to quote to attack pansexuality.

"Do not expect each magazine to be representative of all bisexuals, for our diversity is too vast. Do not expect a clear-cut definition of bisexuality to jump out from the pages. We bisexuals tend to define bisexuality in ways that are unique to our own individuality. There are as many definitions of bisexuality as there are bisexuals. Many of us choose not to label ourselves anything at all, and find the word 'bisexual' to be inadequate and too limiting. Do not assume that the opinions expressed are shared by all bisexuals, by those actively involved in the Bisexual Movement, by the ATM staff, or the BABN Board of Directors.

visibilityofcolor

HMM looking at this, it seems kind of biphobic to me. I really don't agree with this part:

find the word 'bisexual' to be inadequate and too limiting.



because that again is just misconceiving what bisexuality actually is and is biphobic. i've never actually seen any bi person use the bisexual manifesto but it's certainly something i don't really agree with

Simon Godwin: "We need Shakespeare to really roar back out of the box to justify us coming back to him"

Tilly Palmer speaks to Simon Godwin, Artistic Director of the Shakespeare Theatre Company, about Shakespeare in...

WWW.VARSITY.CO.UK

Simon Godwin has just finished directing a film adaptation of Romeo and Juliet, filmed during lockdown. He directed the very same play with the Marlowe Society some years earlier, having just graduated from Cambridge, with undergraduates Tom Hiddleston as Romeo and Lydia Fox as Juliet. He tells me his vision for that performance was Fellini-esque "filled with a sort of promise and optimism". As Godwin explains, "we know that Shakespeare in Hamlet describes his work as being a 'Mirror' to the form and pressures of the age". Perhaps this also reflected the promise and optimism of being a student standing at a threshold, about to embark on an exciting career path…

"When I do Shakespeare, pretty much the first place I come back to is Cambridge. And I came back to St Catherines, where I was an undergraduate, and I talked to my Director of Studies Dr Paul Hartle about the play. And Dr Hester Lees-Jeffries and Dr Caroline Gonda. These three academics at the college remain my touchstone, my guiding spirit. And I find those dialogues incredibly helpful and enriching and so I think as a director the aesthetics and the textual analysis go hand in hand."

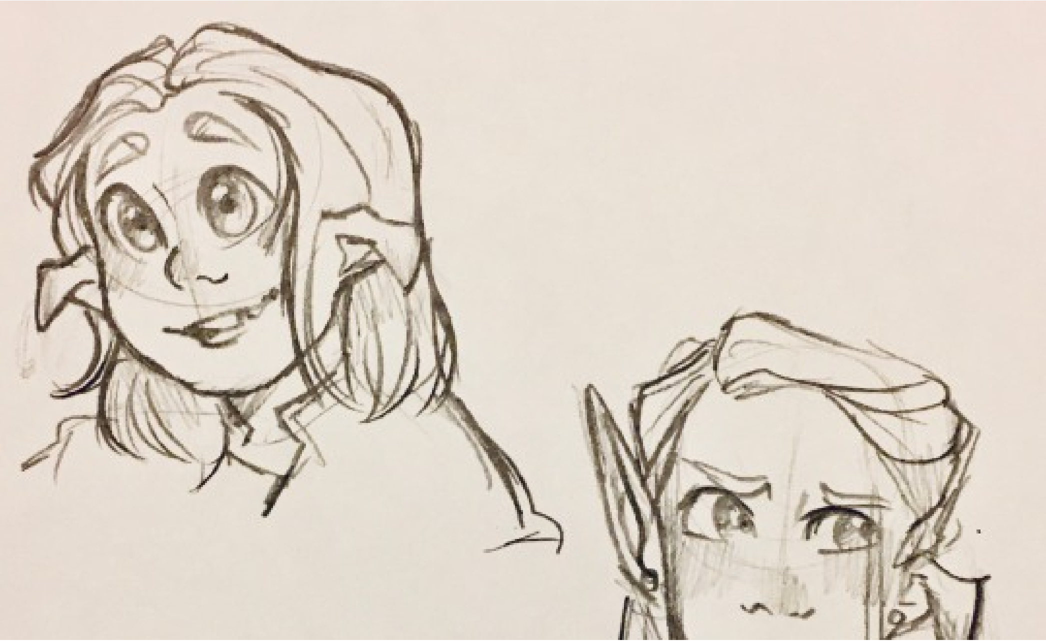
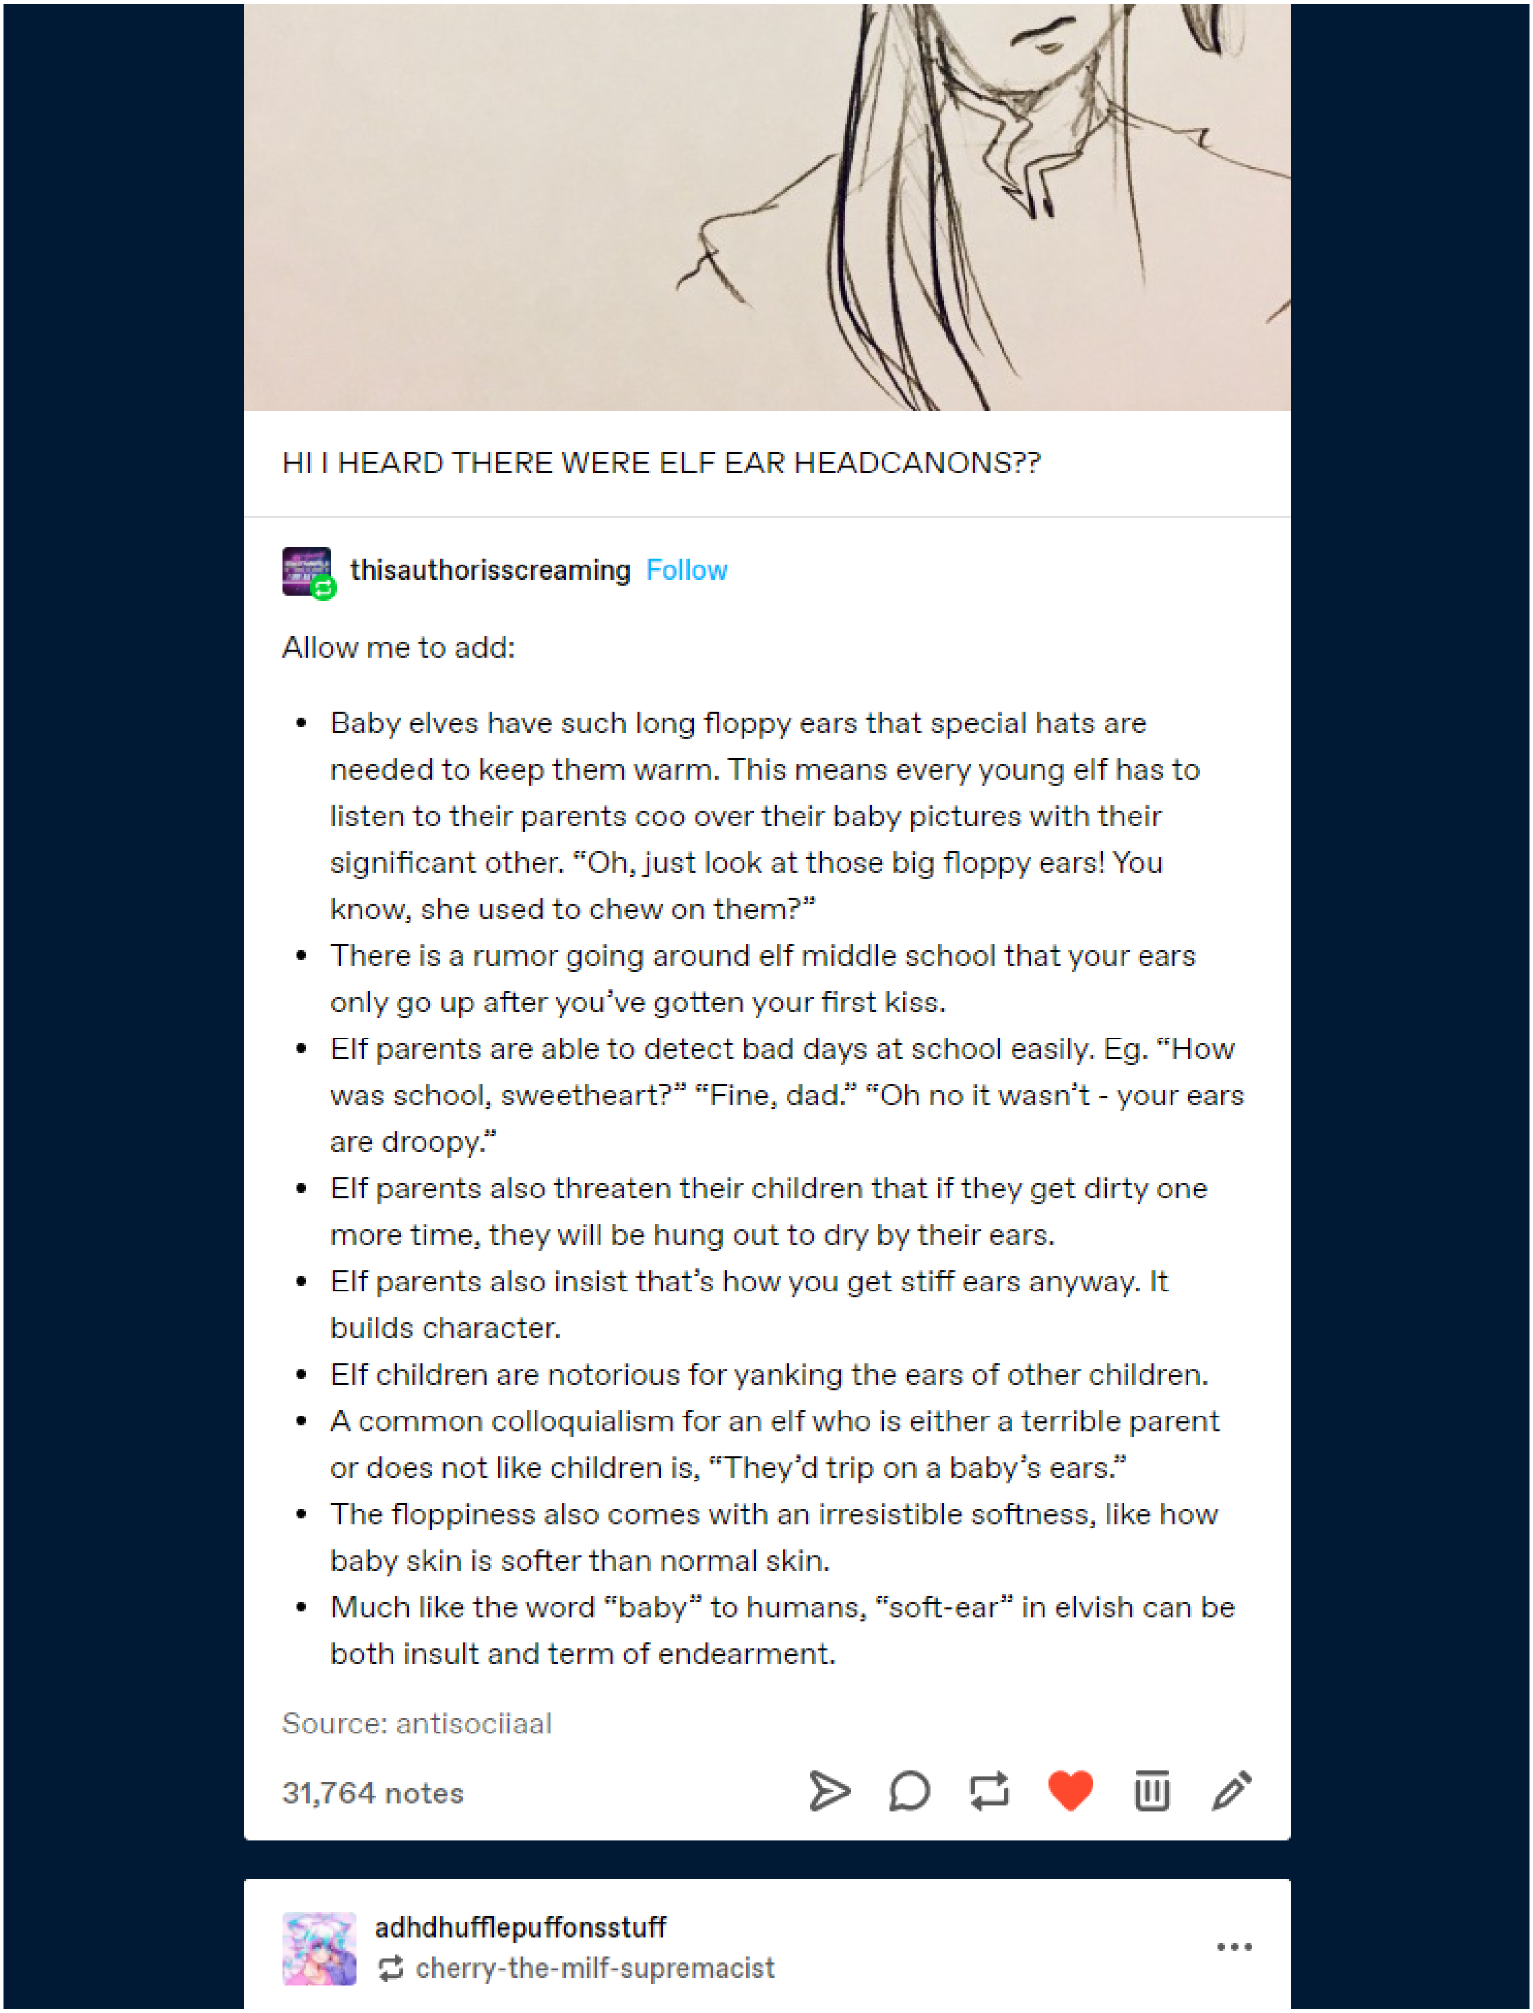
midnightziege Follow





HI I HEARD THERE WERE ELF EAR HEADCANONS??

thisauthorisscreaming Follow

Allow me to add:

- Baby elves have such long floppy ears that special hats are needed to keep them warm. This means every young elf has to listen to their parents coo over their baby pictures with their significant other. "Oh, just look at those big floppy ears! You know, she used to chew on them?"
- There is a rumor going around elf middle school that your ears only go up after you've gotten your first kiss.
- Elf parents are able to detect bad days at school easily. Eg. "How was school, sweetheart?" "Fine, dad." "Oh no it wasn't - your ears are droopy."
- Elf parents also threaten their children that if they get dirty one more time, they will be hung out to dry by their ears.
- Elf parents also insist that's how you get stiff ears anyway. It builds character.
- Elf children are notorious for yanking the ears of other children.
- A common colloquialism for an elf who is either a terrible parent or does not like children is, "They'd trip on a baby's ears."
- The floppiness also comes with an irresistible softness, like how baby skin is softer than normal skin.
- Much like the word "baby" to humans, "soft-ear" in elvish can be both insult and term of endearment.

sparkeshark answered:

Yes one of my oldest, deepest faves! I ship it 100%.

They bring out the best in each other, they trust each other so deeply, and they’re so sweet. Something about how Goliath woke up bitter and suspicious and Elisa came to be the first person he could trust again- and she never let him down. I’m a sucker for protector roles she never let him down. I'm a sucker for protector roles, too. When a character can & will give their life to keep that SO safe… that's love. I also love that despite Goliath having a sharp temper and being stubborn, he (usually) listens to her. As a kid, seeing a female character like Elisa was amazing to me- she's so strong, smart, and is never made out to be a "weak" character despite being surrounded by literal super powered creatures. I loved her then & now. She did everything to keep her loved ones safe and she was so bonded to Goliath from day one- it grows so much over the series; they're just great together!

Unpopular opinion (maybe?) I don't care for the ideas of them having children. It's in a lot of fanfic in a lot of ways but I just don't like it. They're different species and that was a hardship/sacrifice they chose for each other IMO. I can't be convinced her human body can birth a clawed, winged creature… or lay an egg. But that's just me!

TLDR tbh my fave is that he is huge and she is tiny lol it's cute

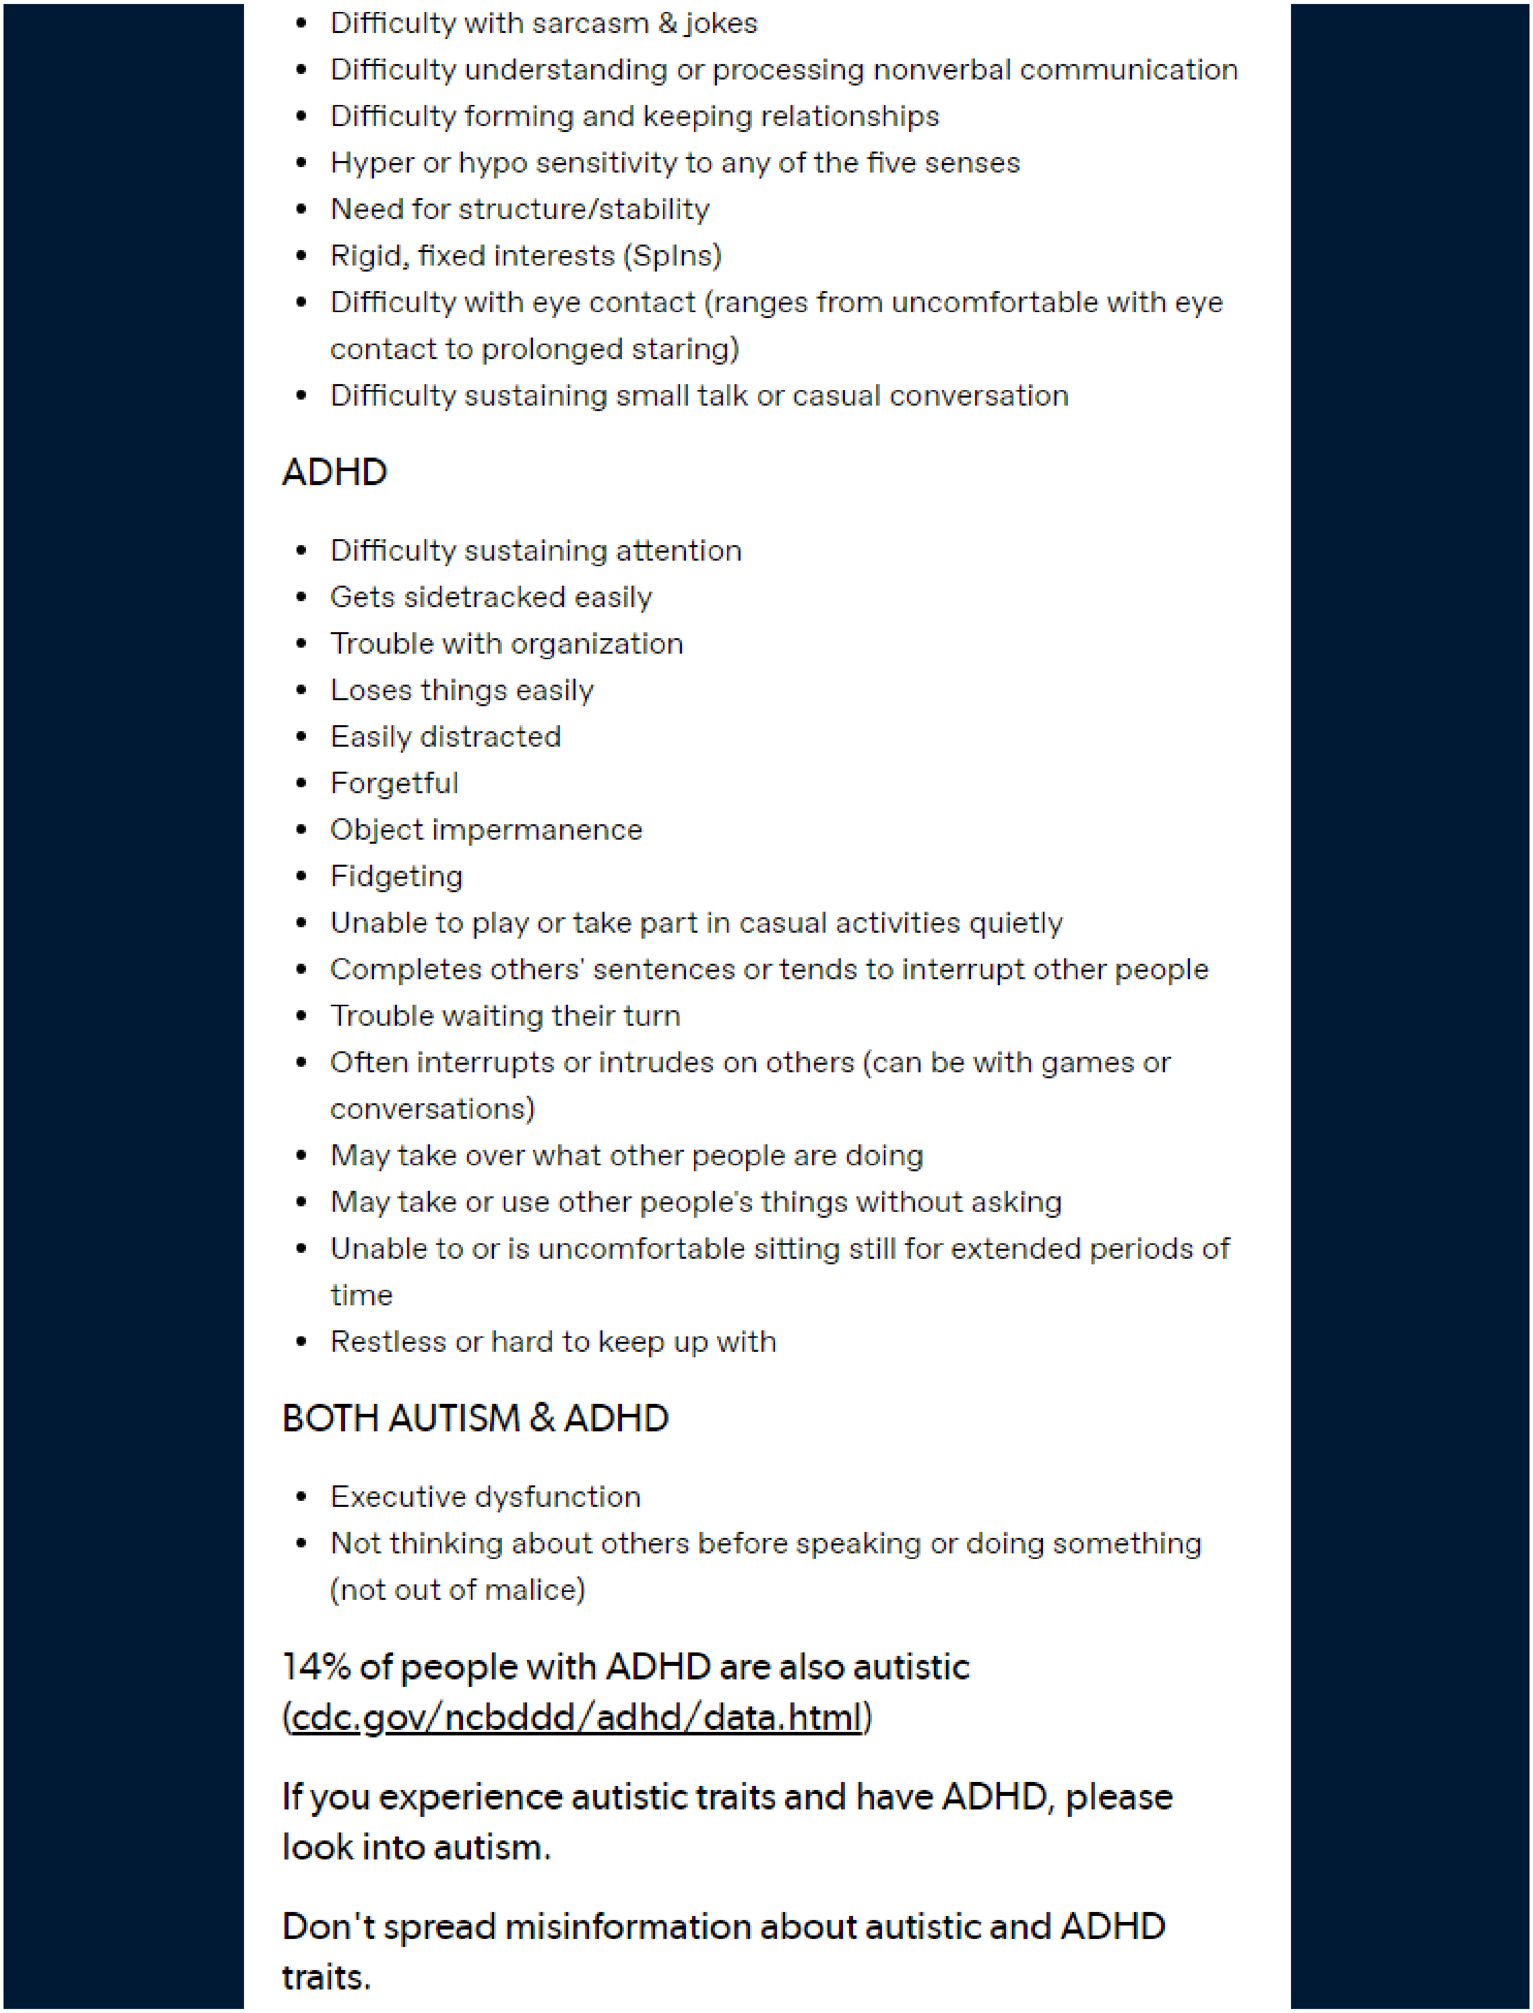
Autism versus ADHD

The biggest difference between autism and ADHD is that autism is associated with social difficulties and sensory issues and ADHD is associated with attention, organization, hyperactivity-impulsivity, and memory issues.

AUTISM



- Difficulty with sarcasm & jokes
- Difficulty understanding or processing nonverbal communication
- Difficulty forming and keeping relationships
- Hyper or hypo sensitivity to any of the five senses
- Need for structure/stability
- Rigid, fixed interests (SpIns)
- Difficulty with eye contact (ranges from uncomfortable with eye contact to prolonged staring)
- Difficulty sustaining small talk or casual conversation

ADHD

- Difficulty sustaining attention
- Gets sidetracked easily
- Trouble with organization
- Loses things easily
- Easily distracted
- Forgetful
- Object impermanence
- Fidgeting
- Unable to play or take part in casual activities quietly
- Completes others' sentences or tends to interrupt other people
- Trouble waiting their turn
- Often interrupts or intrudes on others (can be with games or conversations)
- May take over what other people are doing
- May take or use other people's things without asking
- Unable to or is uncomfortable sitting still for extended periods of time
- Restless or hard to keep up with

BOTH AUTISM & ADHD

- Executive dysfunction
- Not thinking about others before speaking or doing something (not out of malice)

14% of people with ADHD are also autistic (cdc.gov/ncbddd/adhd/data.html)

If you experience autistic traits and have ADHD, please look into autism.

Don't spread misinformation about autistic and ADHD traits.

They really gave us Loki crying over Frigga and Odin PLUS admitting he doesn't like hurting people in the first episode. I AM HEALED

ikol-cosplay Follow

Small addition: I liked him reacting to his family because we've been saying for years that he loves them and we just got more proof of that! Whether or not they deserved that love is not something I really thought relevant in this case. It did the trick of making Loki question existence, as it was supposed to for the plot.

latent-thoughts Follow

Exactly! These scenes weren't about how much his family loved him; they were meant to show his perspective, his love for them all.

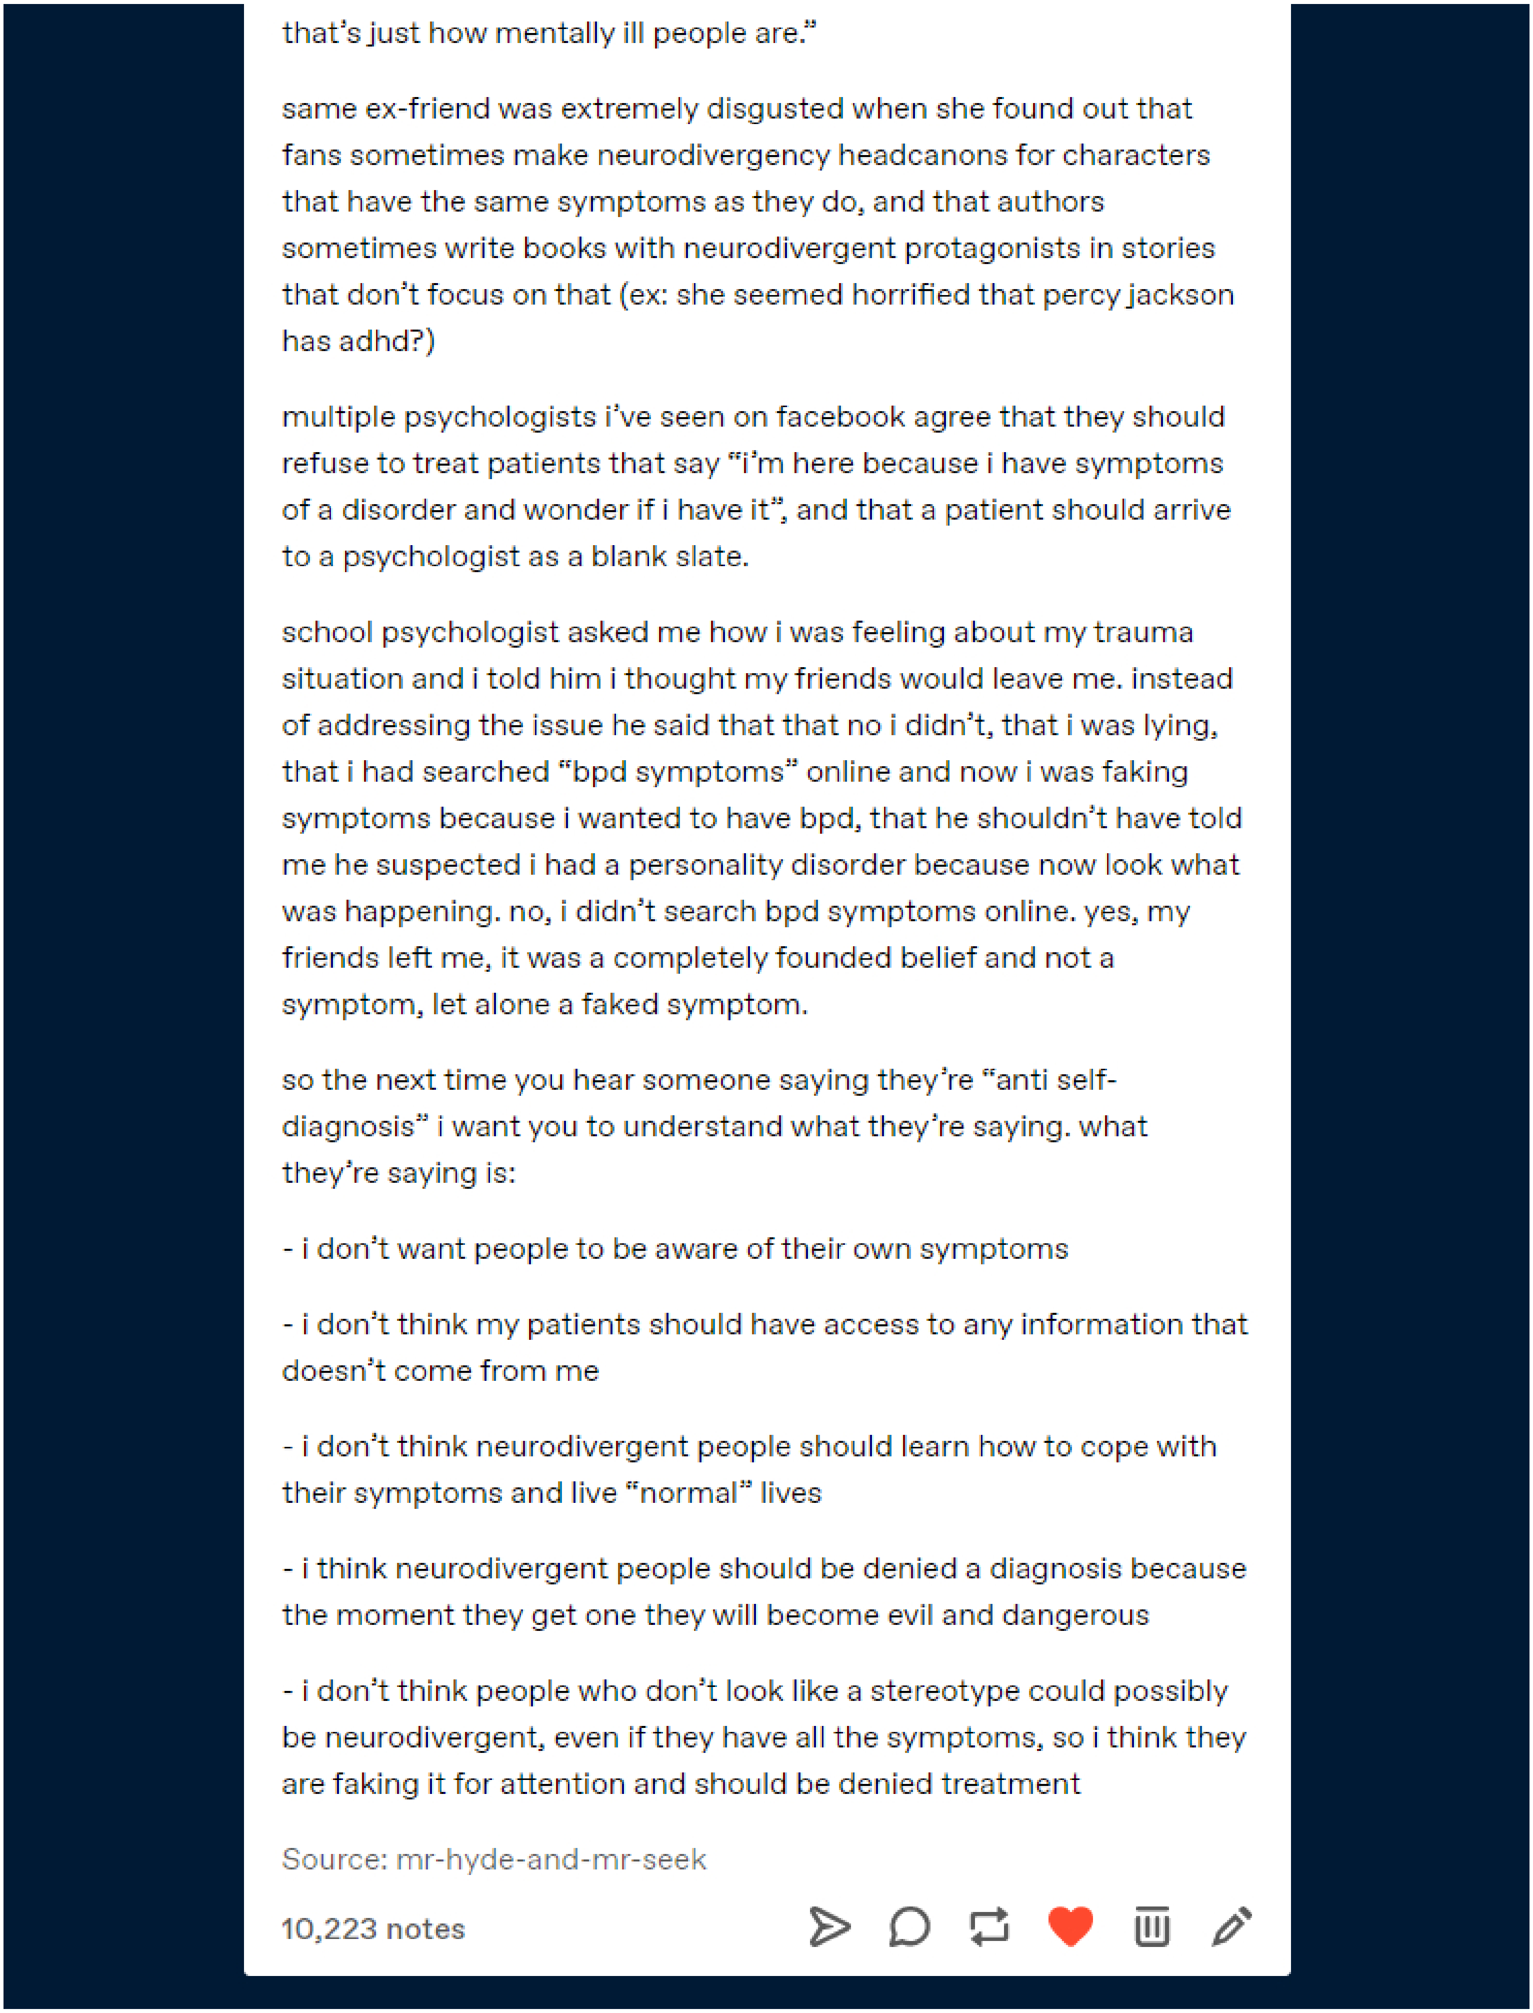
a while ago i attended this lecture on autism. guy in the audience said he had many of the symptoms that were presented and asked what should he do to get treatment and possibly a diagnosis. instead of answering his question the psychologist went on a tangent about how “the clinic reigns all powerful over guesswork”, and how actually it has become a trend amongst little children on the internet to claim that they are autistic for cool points, and that this hurts real autistic people. no she didn’t tell him how to get his symptoms looked into, she just made it very clear that to her, aknowledging your own symptoms is bad and evil and hurts the poor real mentally ill people.

an ex-friend of mine, then a psychology major and by now probably a full psychologist, once lectured me on how horrible and bad it was that i told her “i probably have some sort of neurodivergency”, and that if i were her patient she would never give me a diagnosis because “you aren’t like this now, but i know that if you get a diagnosis you’ll use it as an excuse to start treating people badly.



that's just how mentally ill people are."

same ex-friend was extremely disgusted when she found out that fans sometimes make neurodivergency headcanons for characters that have the same symptoms as they do, and that authors sometimes write books with neurodivergent protagonists in stories that don't focus on that (ex: she seemed horrified that percy jackson has adhd?)

multiple psychologists i've seen on facebook agree that they should refuse to treat patients that say "i'm here because i have symptoms of a disorder and wonder if i have it", and that a patient should arrive to a psychologist as a blank slate.

school psychologist asked me how i was feeling about my trauma situation and i told him i thought my friends would leave me. instead of addressing the issue he said that that no i didn't, that i was lying, that i had searched "bpd symptoms" online and now i was faking symptoms because i wanted to have bpd, that he shouldn't have told me he suspected i had a personality disorder because now look what was happening. no, i didn't search bpd symptoms online. yes, my friends left me, it was a completely founded belief and not a symptom, let alone a faked symptom.

so the next time you hear someone saying they're "anti self-diagnosis" i want you to understand what they're saying. what they're saying is:

- i don't want people to be aware of their own symptoms

- i don't think my patients should have access to any information that doesn't come from me

- i don't think neurodivergent people should learn how to cope with their symptoms and live "normal" lives

- i think neurodivergent people should be denied a diagnosis because the moment they get one they will become evil and dangerous

- i don't think people who don't look like a stereotype could possibly be neurodivergent, even if they have all the symptoms, so i think they are faking it for attention and should be denied treatment

What if I was a robot and I didn't know it?

Oh my gosh. NO no non non no no no

Do you guys even REALIZE the IMPACT OF this????

By hiding his heritage from him, Odin shattered Loki's sense of identity SO MUCH that Loki genuinely has a moment of consideration to the possibility that maybe he is a robot.

Loki considers that possibility.

He never would have before Thor 1. Never.

But if he wasn't Asgardian and he was a Frost Giant, maybe he's not a Frost Giant, either.

And Loki is actually anxious about the idea that he might be a robot. This is. PAIN.

lokislittlesigyn

//Loki spoilers

He's already discovered, by mistake and chance really, that he's something he was raised to consider less-than-person. A monster, in his own words.

The fact he has reason to, even for a brief moment, genuinely consider "Wait.. Am I even an organic, "truly living" being at all? What if I didn't know - just like I didn't know I was Jotun?" is.. heartbreaking.

Loki my beloved, I want to hold you more than ever.

stygianchaos

this and also i'm sure after seeing what thanos has done to nebula in the past, he could be unsure about what was done to him in his period of torture. bc this mans is fresh out of the thanos torture chamber!! it's probably been like less than a week!!!

iamanartichoke

You guys took a Mildly Amusing and made it a Very Sad.

latent-thoughts

I think it was supposed to be both sad and funny. The whole episode was a cocktail of sad and funny.

sserpente

Yes to all of this! It's bittersweet in this context!

Call me crazy but I related to this somehow though?! I mean, whenever I'm at the airport and I know I'm not carrying any metal on me, I'm still afraid it'll beep? Or when I leave a shop without buying something and I obviously haven't taken anything but I'm worried it'll beep? I can't be the only one! I love how Loki is also overthinking this because hypothetically, if he walks through that thing, something could happen, even if it's unlikely, haha!

And why might that be, Auntie Beeb?

Section 28 or Clause 28[note 1] was a British law that prohibited the "promotion of homosexuality" by local authorities. Introduced by Margaret Thatcher's Conservative government, it was in effect from 1988 to 2000 (in Scotland) and 2003 (in England and Wales). It caused many organisations such as lesbian, gay and bisexual student support groups to close or limit their activities or self-censor.[1]

Trying to figure out if you're ace or aro can be so goddamn hard because it's like, trying to find the absence of something. Imagine you're at a pond and you want to know if there are any turtles, or fish. Say you find a turtle and you're like "great! Now I know there are turtles." Or a fish, now you know for sure there are fish. Or you find both, and now you know for a fact there are both turtles and fish in the pond.

But like, if you don't find any turtles it might be that there are no turtles or maybe you're just really shitty at looking for turtles and maybe you THINK you saw a turtle over there or maybe it was just a stick. Maybe there are only a few turtles. Maybe you need to do something special to find the turtles. Maybe a bunch of these rocks are actually turtles but you couldn't tell them apart. Maybe there are no turtles. You have no idea. Meanwhile some people are saying "Oh there have to be turtles! You'll find them eventually ;)" or "How many turtles have you found in your pond?" or "Try planting some vegetables at the shore to attract the turtles." Or "Oh no! What disaster happened to your pond that there are no turtles?" And you're just standing there wet with an empty net and a tired expression.

But whatever because whether there are turtles or fish or not your pond's ecology works just fine without them because that's what eco-communities do they form a system around what they have. You aren't missing anything if you don't have turtles you just have a pond system without turtles. If someone tried to change you by pouring a bunch of turtles into your pond it would probably fuck something up.

So you don't have to be entirely sure. You don't have to search every inch of the damn pond before you can decide there are probably no turtles. If you want to take the aro or ace label because you think it fits go for it. And if you do find your turtles you can rename the pond. That's fine.

Hello!

I hope I'm not too late to ask this and I apologize if I am.

I love the first episode of Loki though one thing really stuck out for me and perhaps you have some insight to it?

When Loki is being judged at the TVA he mentions it's The Avengers fault because they were doing the time heist; but how does he know that? That Loki would have no knowledge of that whole event in my opinion. Did I miss something? Seriously how does he know about that?

lokihiddleston answered:

Same! Me too in creating gifs I told me this. How he can know that they changed things with time? Like he is from this line of Avengers 2012, Loki could not know anything about it. Not until Mobius shows him after his past, future. After maybe he just suggested ? So, yes, that's weird... 🤔

There's a line where he mentions realizing there were two Tony's present. So I guess he worked it out from there

Guys he must be powerless until like episode 3 or 4 (because apperently locking his powers for like 10 years wasnt enough)

Please help

Hi, my name is S.

I'm a 24-year-old woman in the Midwest.

When I was 16, I met J. He was 21 years old and in college, we met at a party my friend's older brother threw. He was really into me from the beginning. I was flattered that an older guy would be so interested in me. We got serious fast and I ended up getting pregnant at 17. My parents flipped out when they found out and they threw me out. I moved into the house J was sharing with 2 other guys. J wanted me to keep the baby, but I knew I wasn't ready to be a mother yet and I terminated the pregnancy even though I grew up in a really religious household and my parents told me abortion is murder. So my parents wouldn't let me move back in with them after the abortion, and so I dropped out of high school so I could work full time at my retail job and J and I could get a place of our own.

Guys, he was really sweet at first, but he changed. When we met, he would buy me flowers, plan dates, take me on trips. But after the pregnancy, he just became...indifferent? He stopped with the romantic gifts, he really stopped showing interest in me except for when he wanted sex or wanted to criticize me. I couldn't cook right, I couldn't clean right, I couldn't even have sex right—he wanted to do the things he saw in porn, like anal or choking, and I just hated those things. I tried to make him happy but it was just so awful for me and he was so disappointed that I regretted even trying.

I always thought I was too smart to stay with an abusive man, but I didn't see the signs. Yes, he would hit me. Not punches, but he slapped me sometimes. He'd shove me if he was frustrated or sometimes he'd pull my hair.

He controls all the money. My paychecks are direct deposited into an account that he accesses and monitors. All my debit card transactions need to be explained or he explodes. My car is in his name. I truly own nothing in this relationship. We aren't married so I don't have rights to anything of his.

I got an IUD after my abortion, so pregnancy hasn't been an issue, and I’m so thankful for that now. But the thing that finally pushed me to the breaking point was when J wouldn’t let me use the money in our joint account to pay for emergency vet treatment for my cat, Blackberry, who I’ve had since I was a girl in 2007. Blackberry developed some kind of crystals in his bladder that blocked him from being able to urinate, and he needed emergency care that would have been about $2000. J wouldn’t let me pay that much “just for a dumb animal.” I had to watch Blackberry pass away a couple of days later. I was devastated, and I still am. He didn’t deserve to die in pain like that. He was my best friend.

I can’t stay with this man. I can’t. I have finally opened my eyes to what he is.
I live in a pretty rural area without a lot of resources. But I’ve been talking with my cousin in a nearby city and her lease is going to be up in a month and she’s looking for a new place. She said she’d love to have me as a roommate. So I just need to survive until then.

I thought I could stay in a motel until then. A lot of crappy motels have monthly rates that are reasonable. I’ve seen them for $600-700.

If I leave him, I have to leave my car because it’s his. I can get a something driveable for $1500.

I know everyone is in a tight spot right now. But I need help, and I can’t ask anywhere that would reveal my identity. J follows all my other social media. He doesn’t know this tumblr exists and I’m going to keep it that way.

My cousin mailed me a cheap cell phone and I was able to set up a Venmo that will deposit into an account J doesn’t know about.

My user name there is morethanthis.

If you can donate, I cannot express my gratitude. I need to get out of this situation and I don’t have a lot of options.

Here’s a picture of Blackberry as a kitten. RIP little guy, you were one of the best of them. I’m so sorry I failed you.

Here's proof the simplest things can make the biggest impacts.

June 27, 2020

Dear Sara,

This is a little bit awkward. But I've waited a really long time to pass this on to you.

My wife and I came in for haircuts shortly before Christmas of last year.

My wife was suffering from dementia, and you treated her as if you'd been working with dementia patients all your life. You let us sit next to each other, and when it came time for her cut you turned her chair towards me so I could watch her expression as you cut her hair.

It turned out even better than I thought it would.

Sadly, she died in March. And that haircut was one of the last, best moments of her life. She felt so pretty. She visited the mirror in her bathroom several times during the day and would come out beaming.

To see her so happy was priceless.

Looking back, it was likely one of dozens of haircuts you gave that day. But one which revitalized a woman's sense of self and her singular beauty. I hope you always realize the power of your profession.

It's so easy to take things like that for granted.

Sincerely,

A grateful customer

Once you've looked over all those cool links, I have some general advice for you on how you can have some sort of support system going for you:

Reasons to move out of home

You may decide to leave home for many different reasons, including:

- wishing to live independently
- location difficulties – for example, the need to move closer to university
- conflict with your parents
- being asked to leave by your parents.

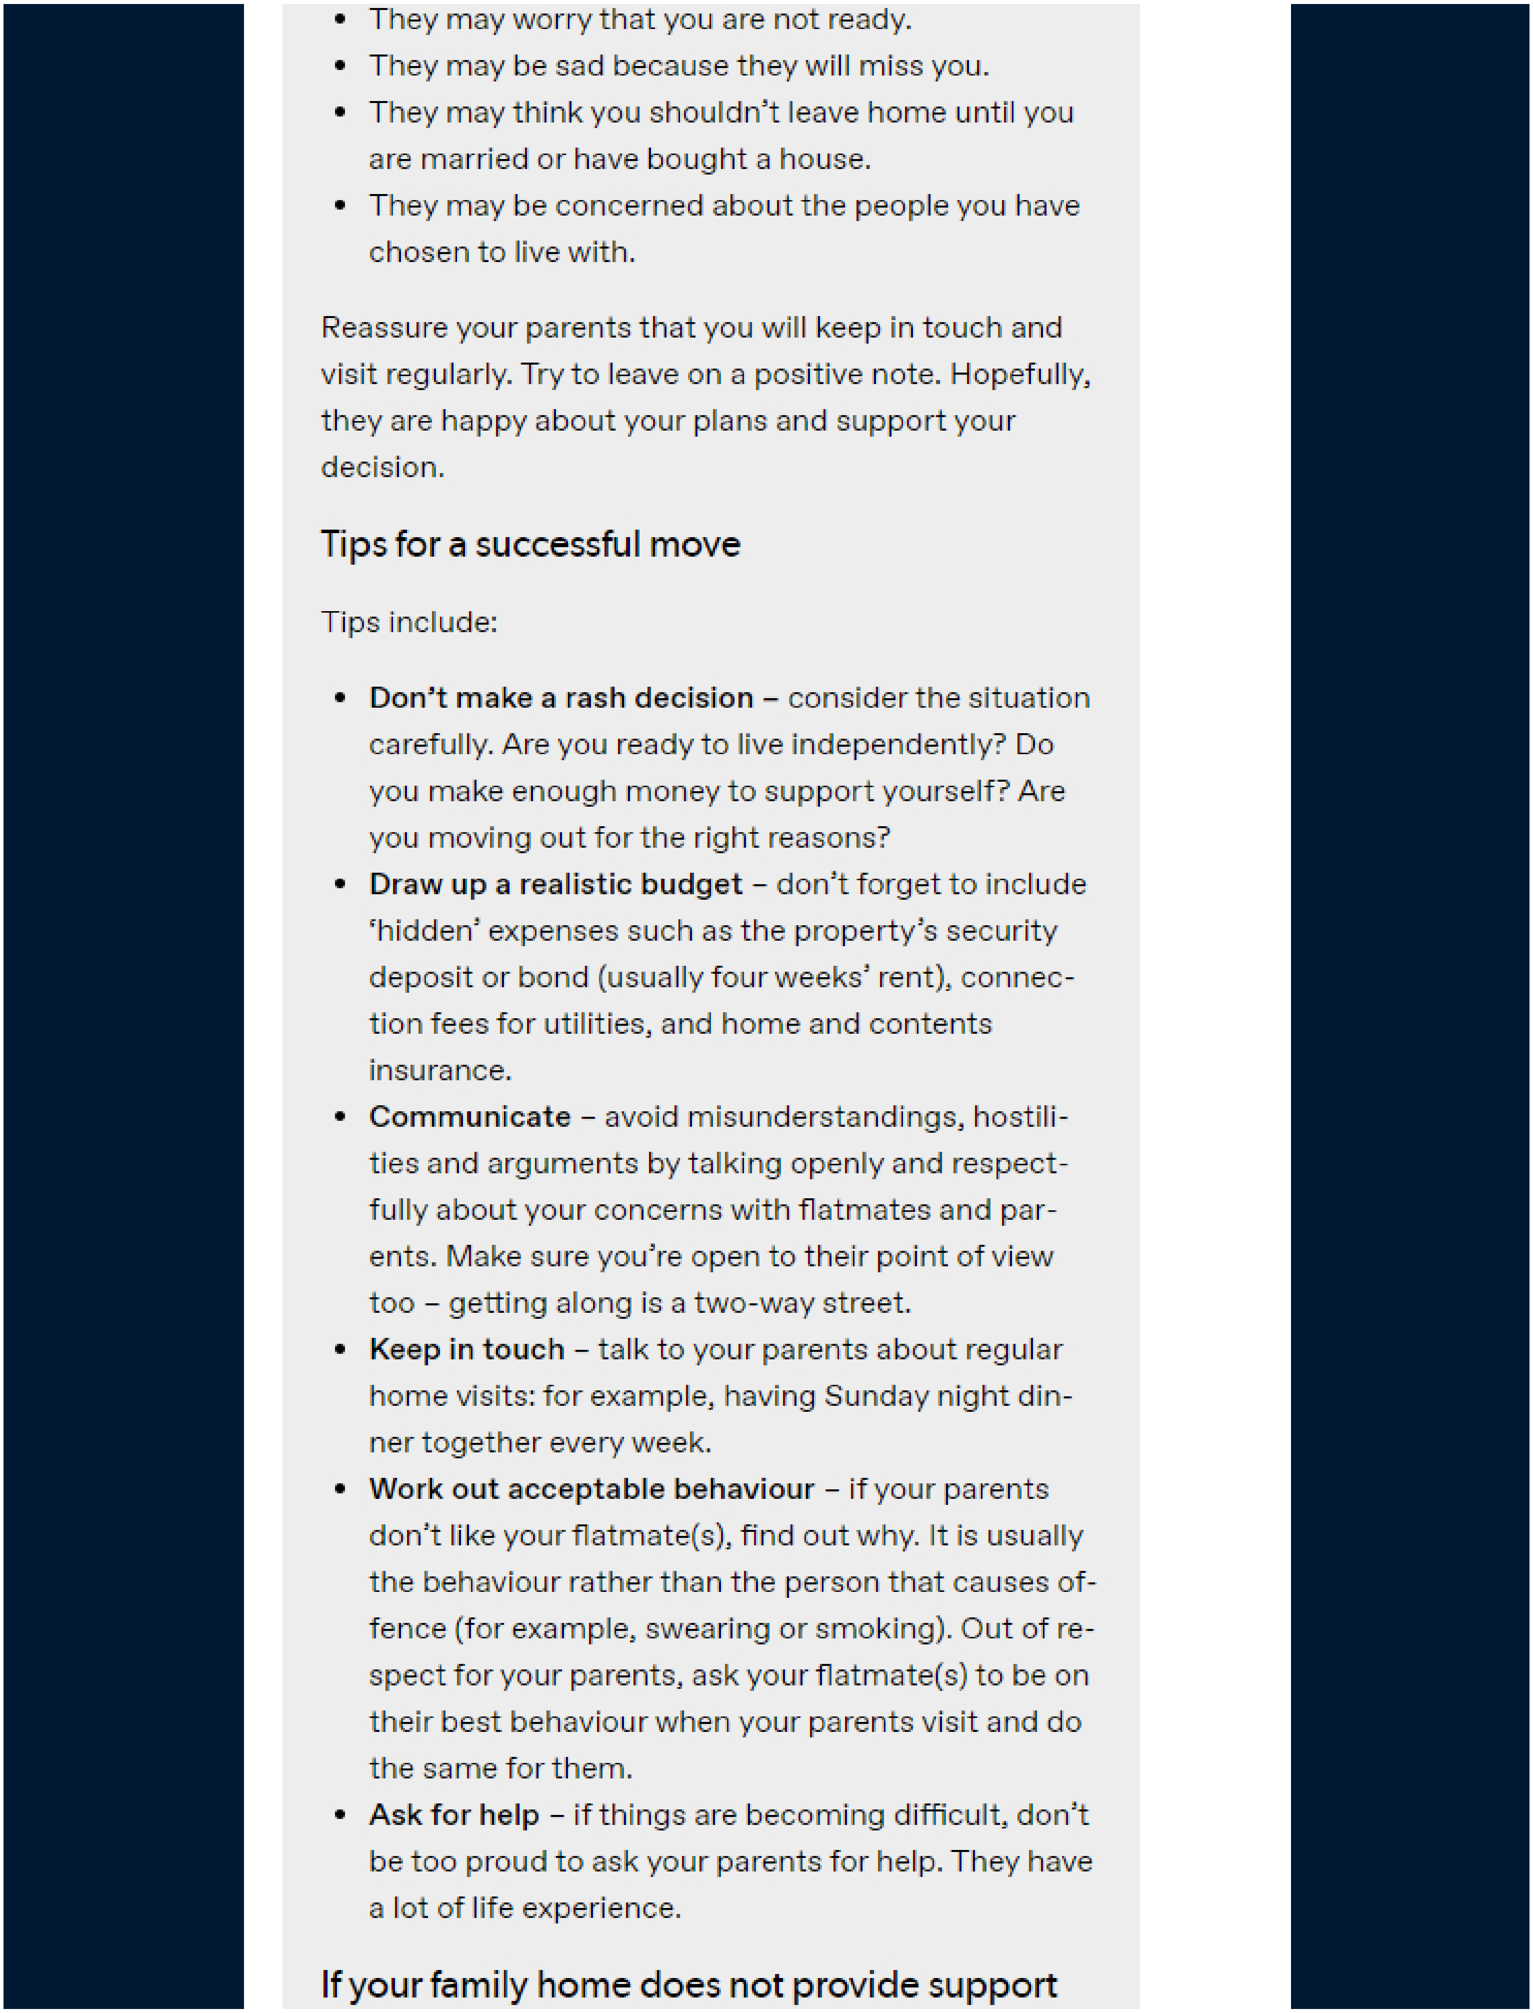
Issues to consider when moving out of home

It's common to be a little unsure when you make a decision like leaving home. You may choose to move, but find that you face problems you didn't anticipate, such as:

- Unreadiness – you may find you are not quite ready to handle all the responsibilities.
- Money worries – bills including rent, utilities like gas and electricity and the cost of groceries may catch you by surprise, especially if you are used to your parents providing for everything. Debt may become an issue.
- Flatmate problems – issues such as paying bills on time, sharing housework equally, friends who never pay board, but stay anyway, and lifestyle incompatibilities (such as a non-drug-user flatting with a drug user) may result in hostilities and arguments.

Your parents may be worried

Think about how your parents may be feeling and talk with them if they are worried about you. Most parents want their children to be happy and independent, but they might be concerned about a lot of different things. For example:



- They may worry that you are not ready.
- They may be sad because they will miss you.
- They may think you shouldn't leave home until you are married or have bought a house.
- They may be concerned about the people you have chosen to live with.

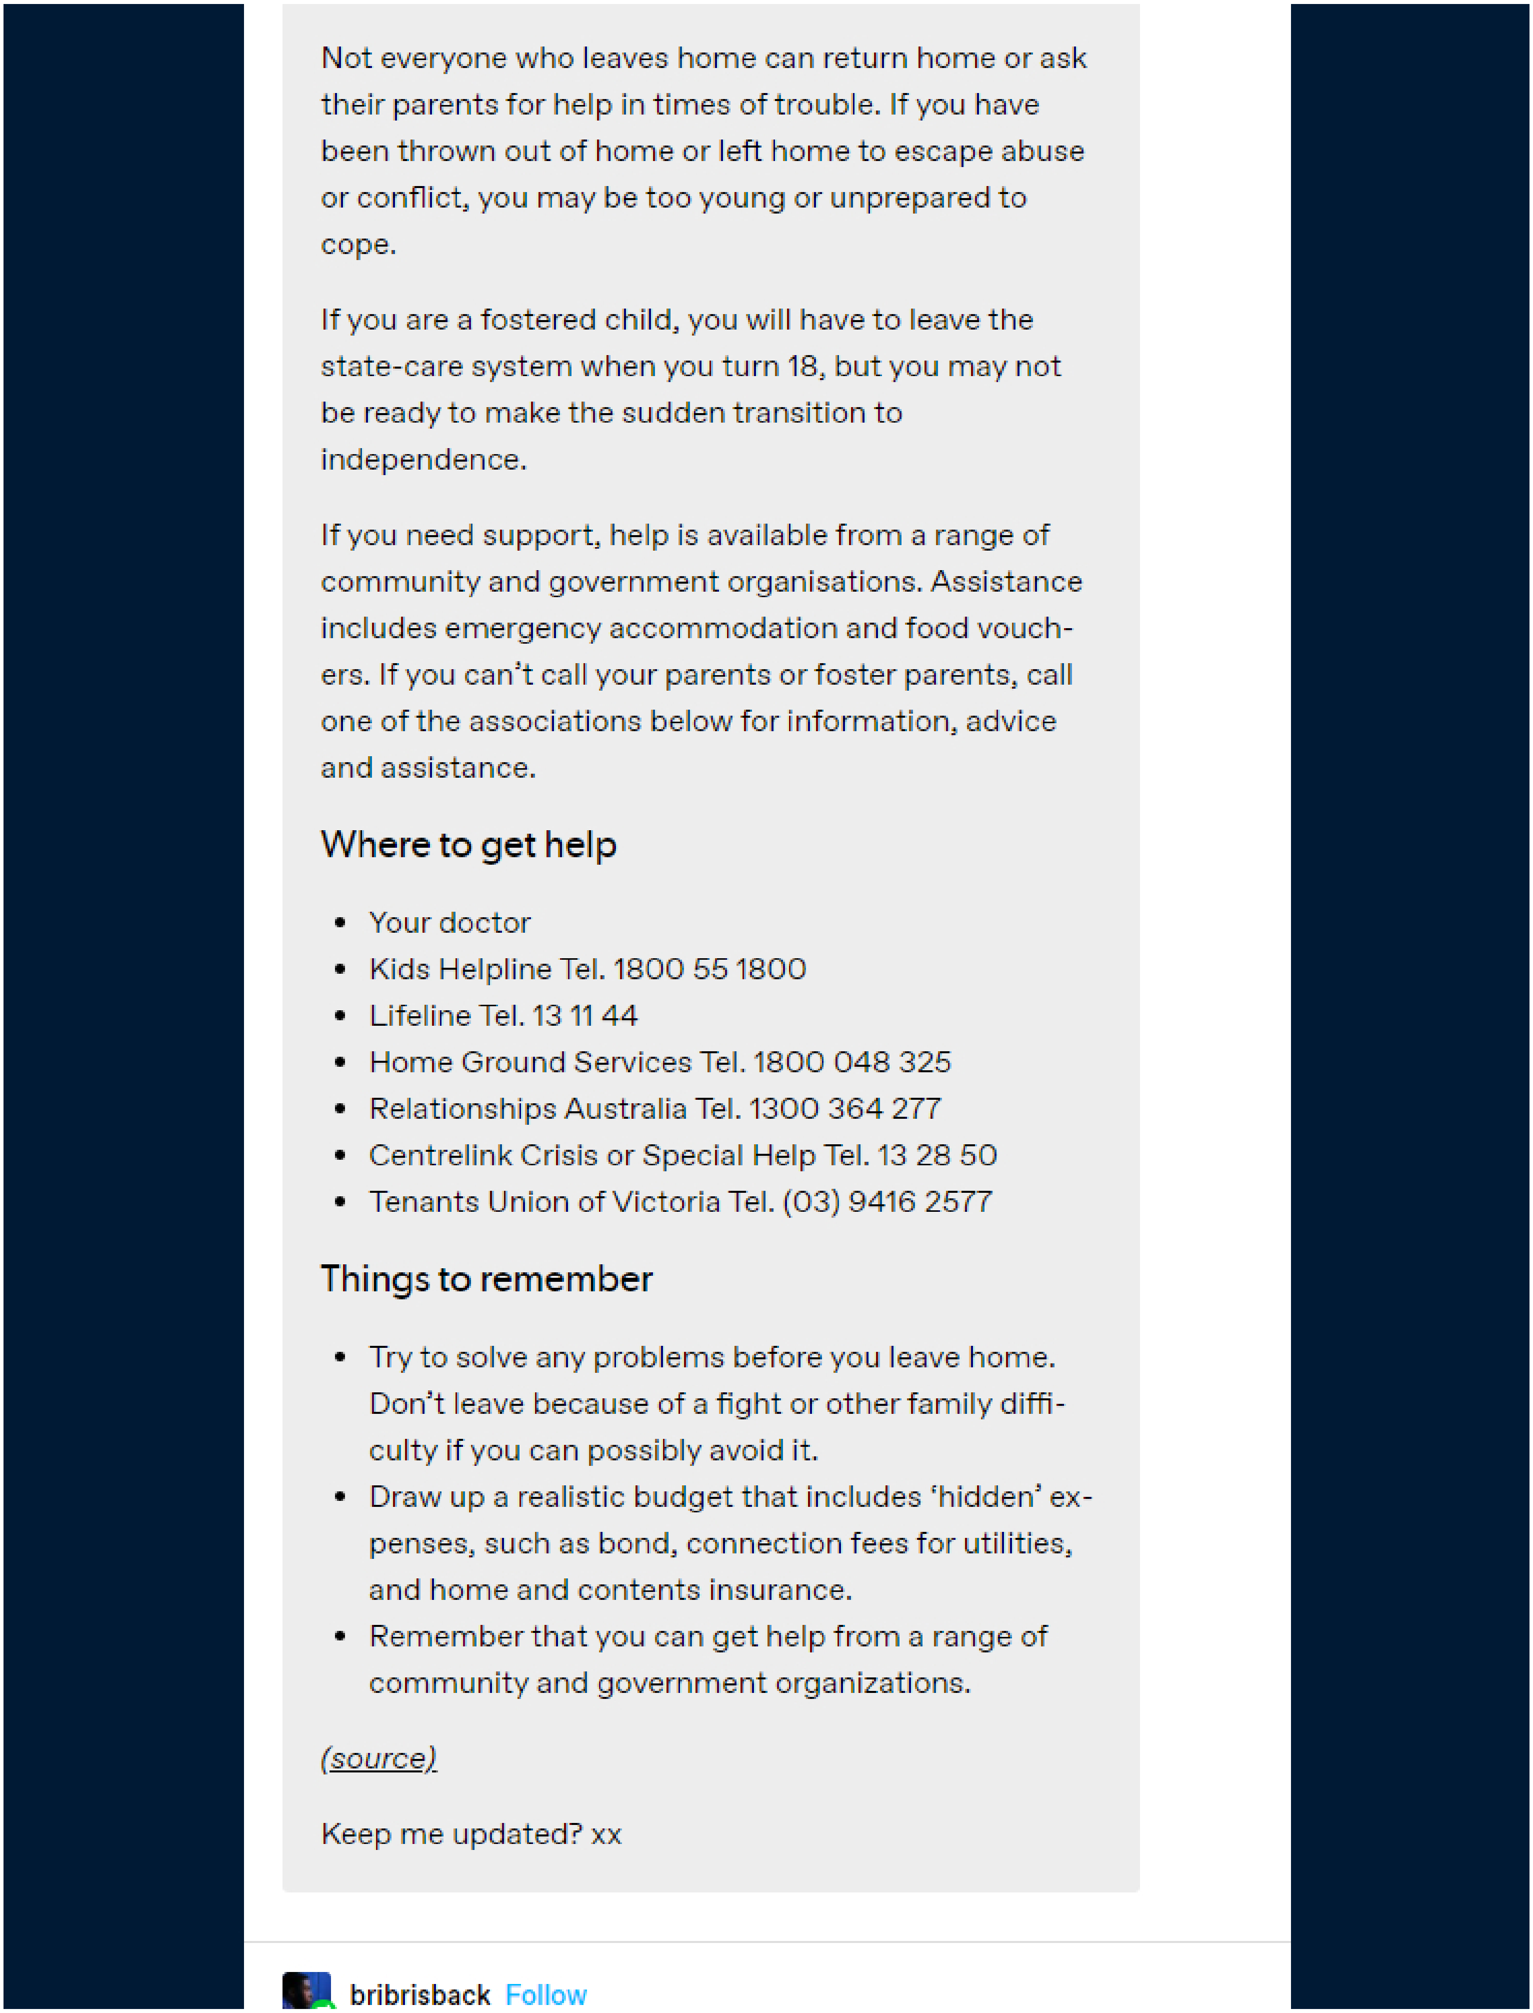
Reassure your parents that you will keep in touch and visit regularly. Try to leave on a positive note. Hopefully, they are happy about your plans and support your decision.

Tips for a successful move

Tips include:

- Don't make a rash decision – consider the situation carefully. Are you ready to live independently? Do you make enough money to support yourself? Are you moving out for the right reasons?
- Draw up a realistic budget – don't forget to include 'hidden' expenses such as the property's security deposit or bond (usually four weeks' rent), connection fees for utilities, and home and contents insurance.
- Communicate – avoid misunderstandings, hostilities and arguments by talking openly and respectfully about your concerns with flatmates and parents. Make sure you're open to their point of view too – getting along is a two-way street.
- Keep in touch – talk to your parents about regular home visits: for example, having Sunday night dinner together every week.
- Work out acceptable behaviour – if your parents don't like your flatmate(s), find out why. It is usually the behaviour rather than the person that causes offence (for example, swearing or smoking). Out of respect for your parents, ask your flatmate(s) to be on their best behaviour when your parents visit and do the same for them.
- Ask for help – if things are becoming difficult, don't be too proud to ask your parents for help. They have a lot of life experience.

If your family home does not provide support



Not everyone who leaves home can return home or ask their parents for help in times of trouble. If you have been thrown out of home or left home to escape abuse or conflict, you may be too young or unprepared to cope.

If you are a fostered child, you will have to leave the state-care system when you turn 18, but you may not be ready to make the sudden transition to independence.

If you need support, help is available from a range of community and government organisations. Assistance includes emergency accommodation and food vouchers. If you can't call your parents or foster parents, call one of the associations below for information, advice and assistance.

Where to get help

- Your doctor
- Kids Helpline Tel. 1800 55 1800
- Lifeline Tel. 13 11 44
- Home Ground Services Tel. 1800 048 325
- Relationships Australia Tel. 1300 364 277
- Centrelink Crisis or Special Help Tel. 13 28 50
- Tenants Union of Victoria Tel. (03) 9416 2577

Things to remember

- Try to solve any problems before you leave home. Don't leave because of a fight or other family difficulty if you can possibly avoid it.
- Draw up a realistic budget that includes 'hidden' expenses, such as bond, connection fees for utilities, and home and contents insurance.
- Remember that you can get help from a range of community and government organizations.

You don’t want to normalize “two guys being straight and friends” you want to normalize physical and emotional closeness with friends. Doing this actually involves breaking down the stigma around homosexuality and letting go of your fear of being seen as gay, but you’d rather pretend that everyone on earth just wants you to be gay and you have to fight against that by being straight with your straight friends.

Look, I wasn't in charge of writing the script for The Mummy (1999), and I'm not saying I could do better, but if I hypothetically had been, there would definitely have been a seen that went like this:

Evie, tied up and about to be sacrificed by demons: "RICK, YOU'RE GOING TO HAVE TO READ THE INSCRIPTION. I NEED YOU TO FIND THE SIGN THAT SAYS "DBT"."

RICK: WHICH ONE IS "DBT"

EVIE: IT'S THE CRESTED HOOPOE SIGN

RICK: HOW THE FUCK AM I SUPPOSED TO KNOW WHICH ONE THE CRESTED HOOPOE IS EVIE: IT LOOKS LIKE THE LAPWING ONLY THE LAPWING'S HEAD IS POINTIER THAN THE CRESTED HOOPOE'S. I THOUGHT YOU SAID YOU'D REVISED THIS?

RICK: NOT IN THAT KIND OF DETAIL. I IGNORED THE BIRDS

EVIE: WHAT DO YOU MEAN YOU " IGNORED THE BIRDS"

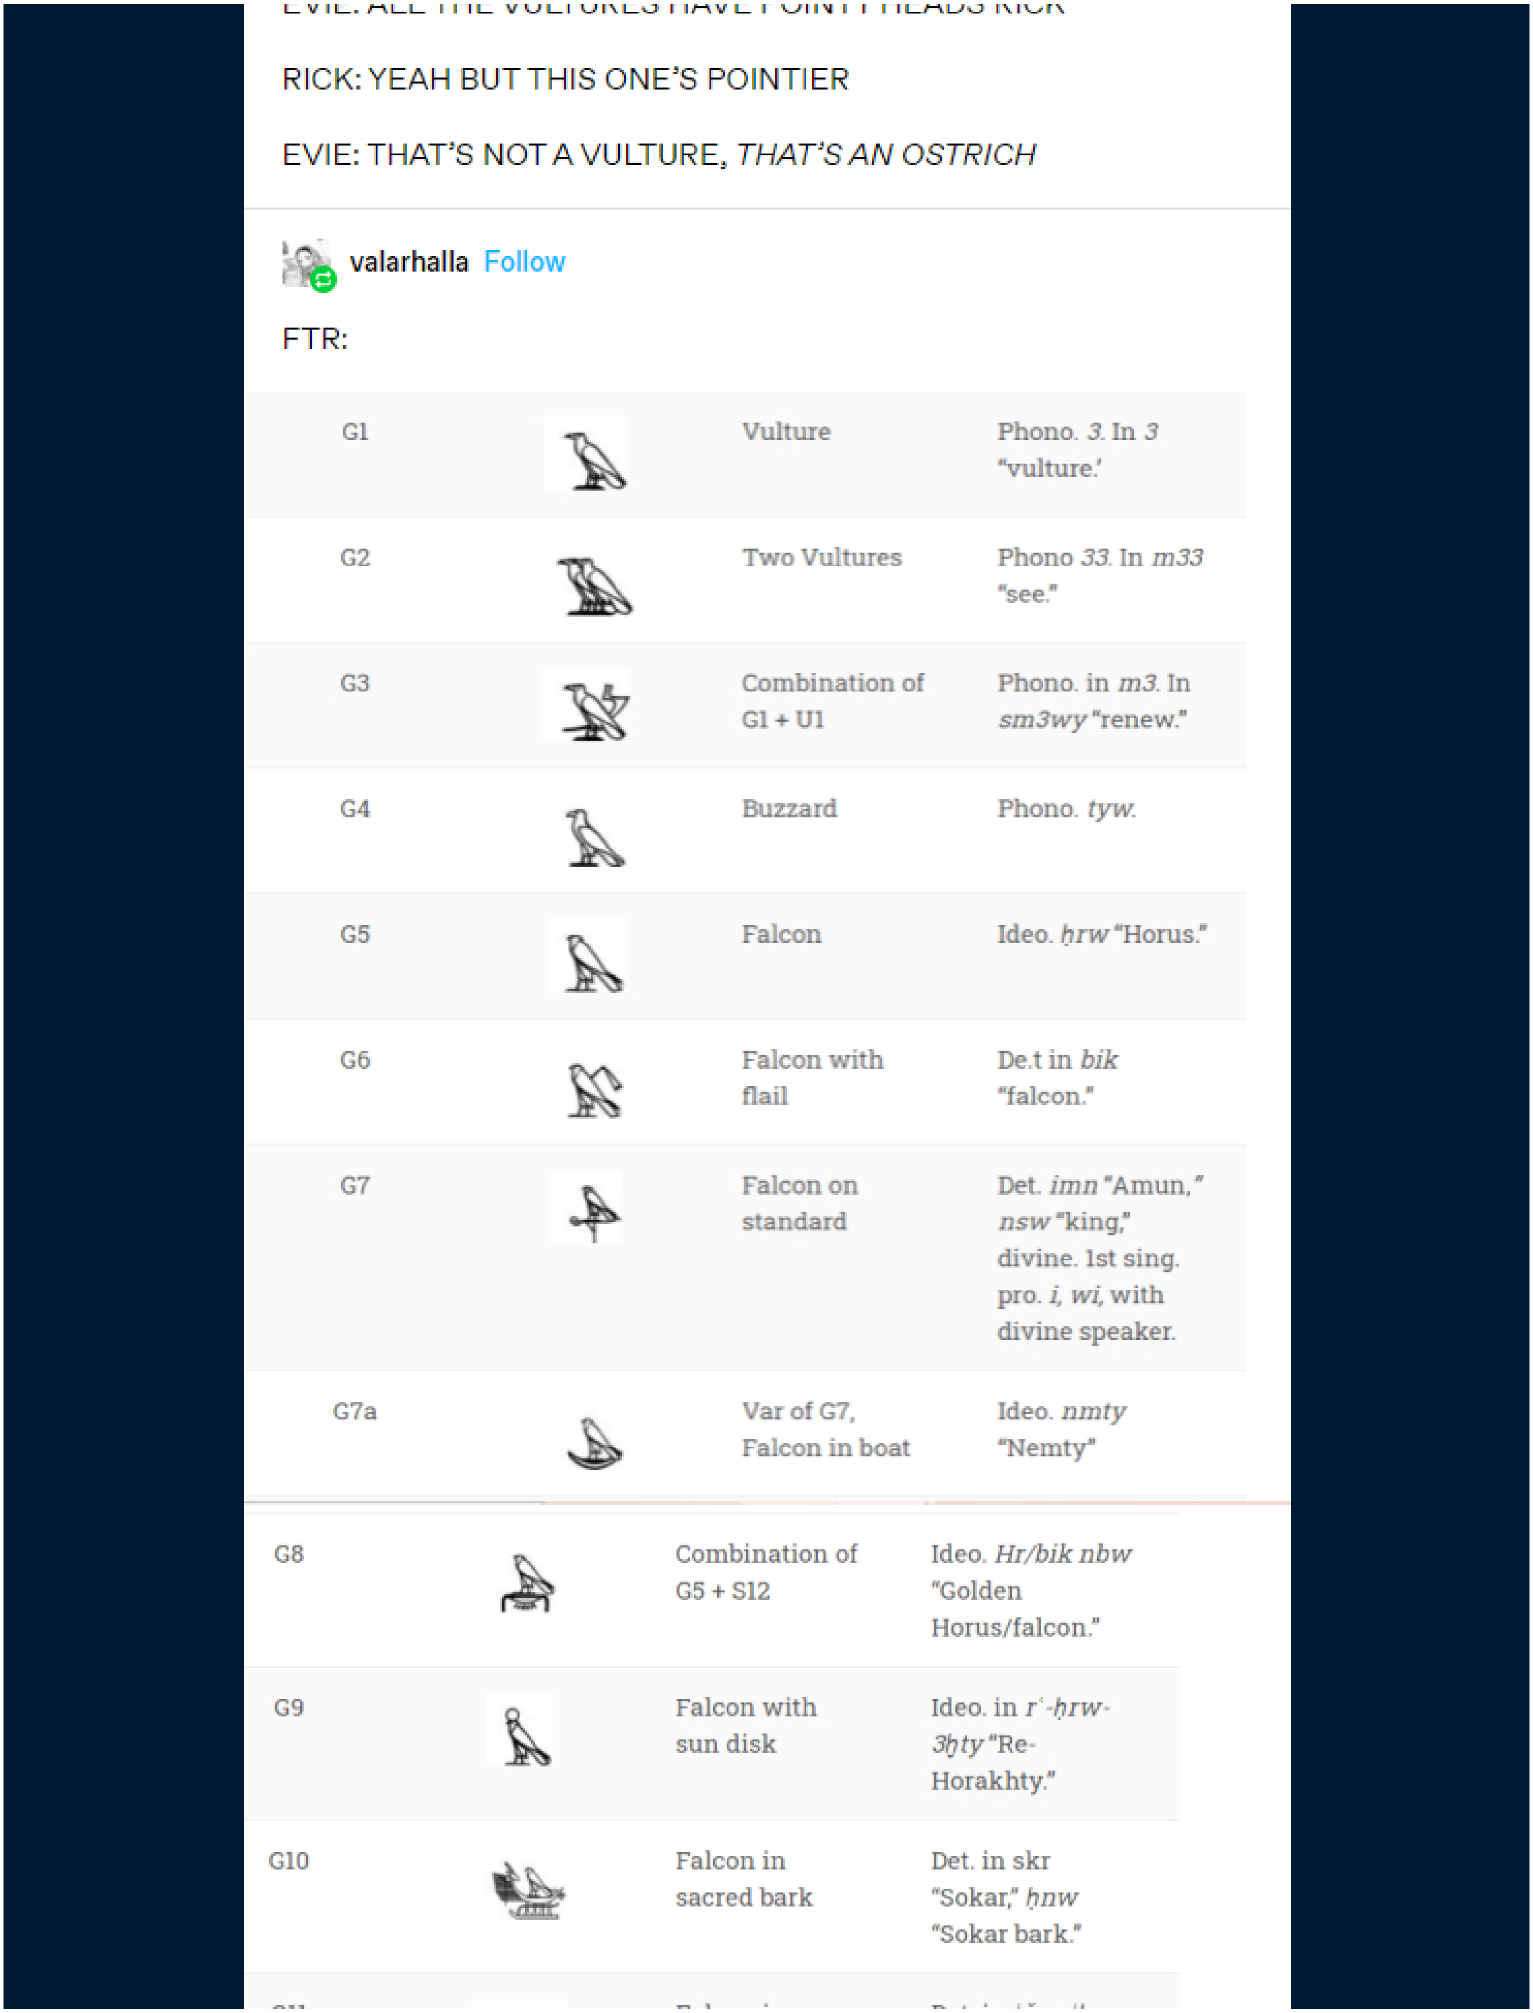
*Demons start chanting

EVIE: WELL YOU'RE JUST GOING TO HAVE TO HURRY UP RICK. IS THERE A SIGN THAT LOOKS LIKE THE LAPWING BUT WITH A POINTIER HEAD

RICK: THERE'S ONE HERE THAT LOOKS LIKE A VULTURE BUT WITH LONGER LEGS AND A POINTY HEAD?

EVIE: ALL THE VULTURES HAVE POINTY HEADS RICK



EVIE: ALL THE VULTURES HAVE POINTY HEADS RICK

RICK: YEAH BUT THIS ONE'S POINTIER

EVIE: THAT'S NOT A VULTURE, THAT'S AN OSTRICH

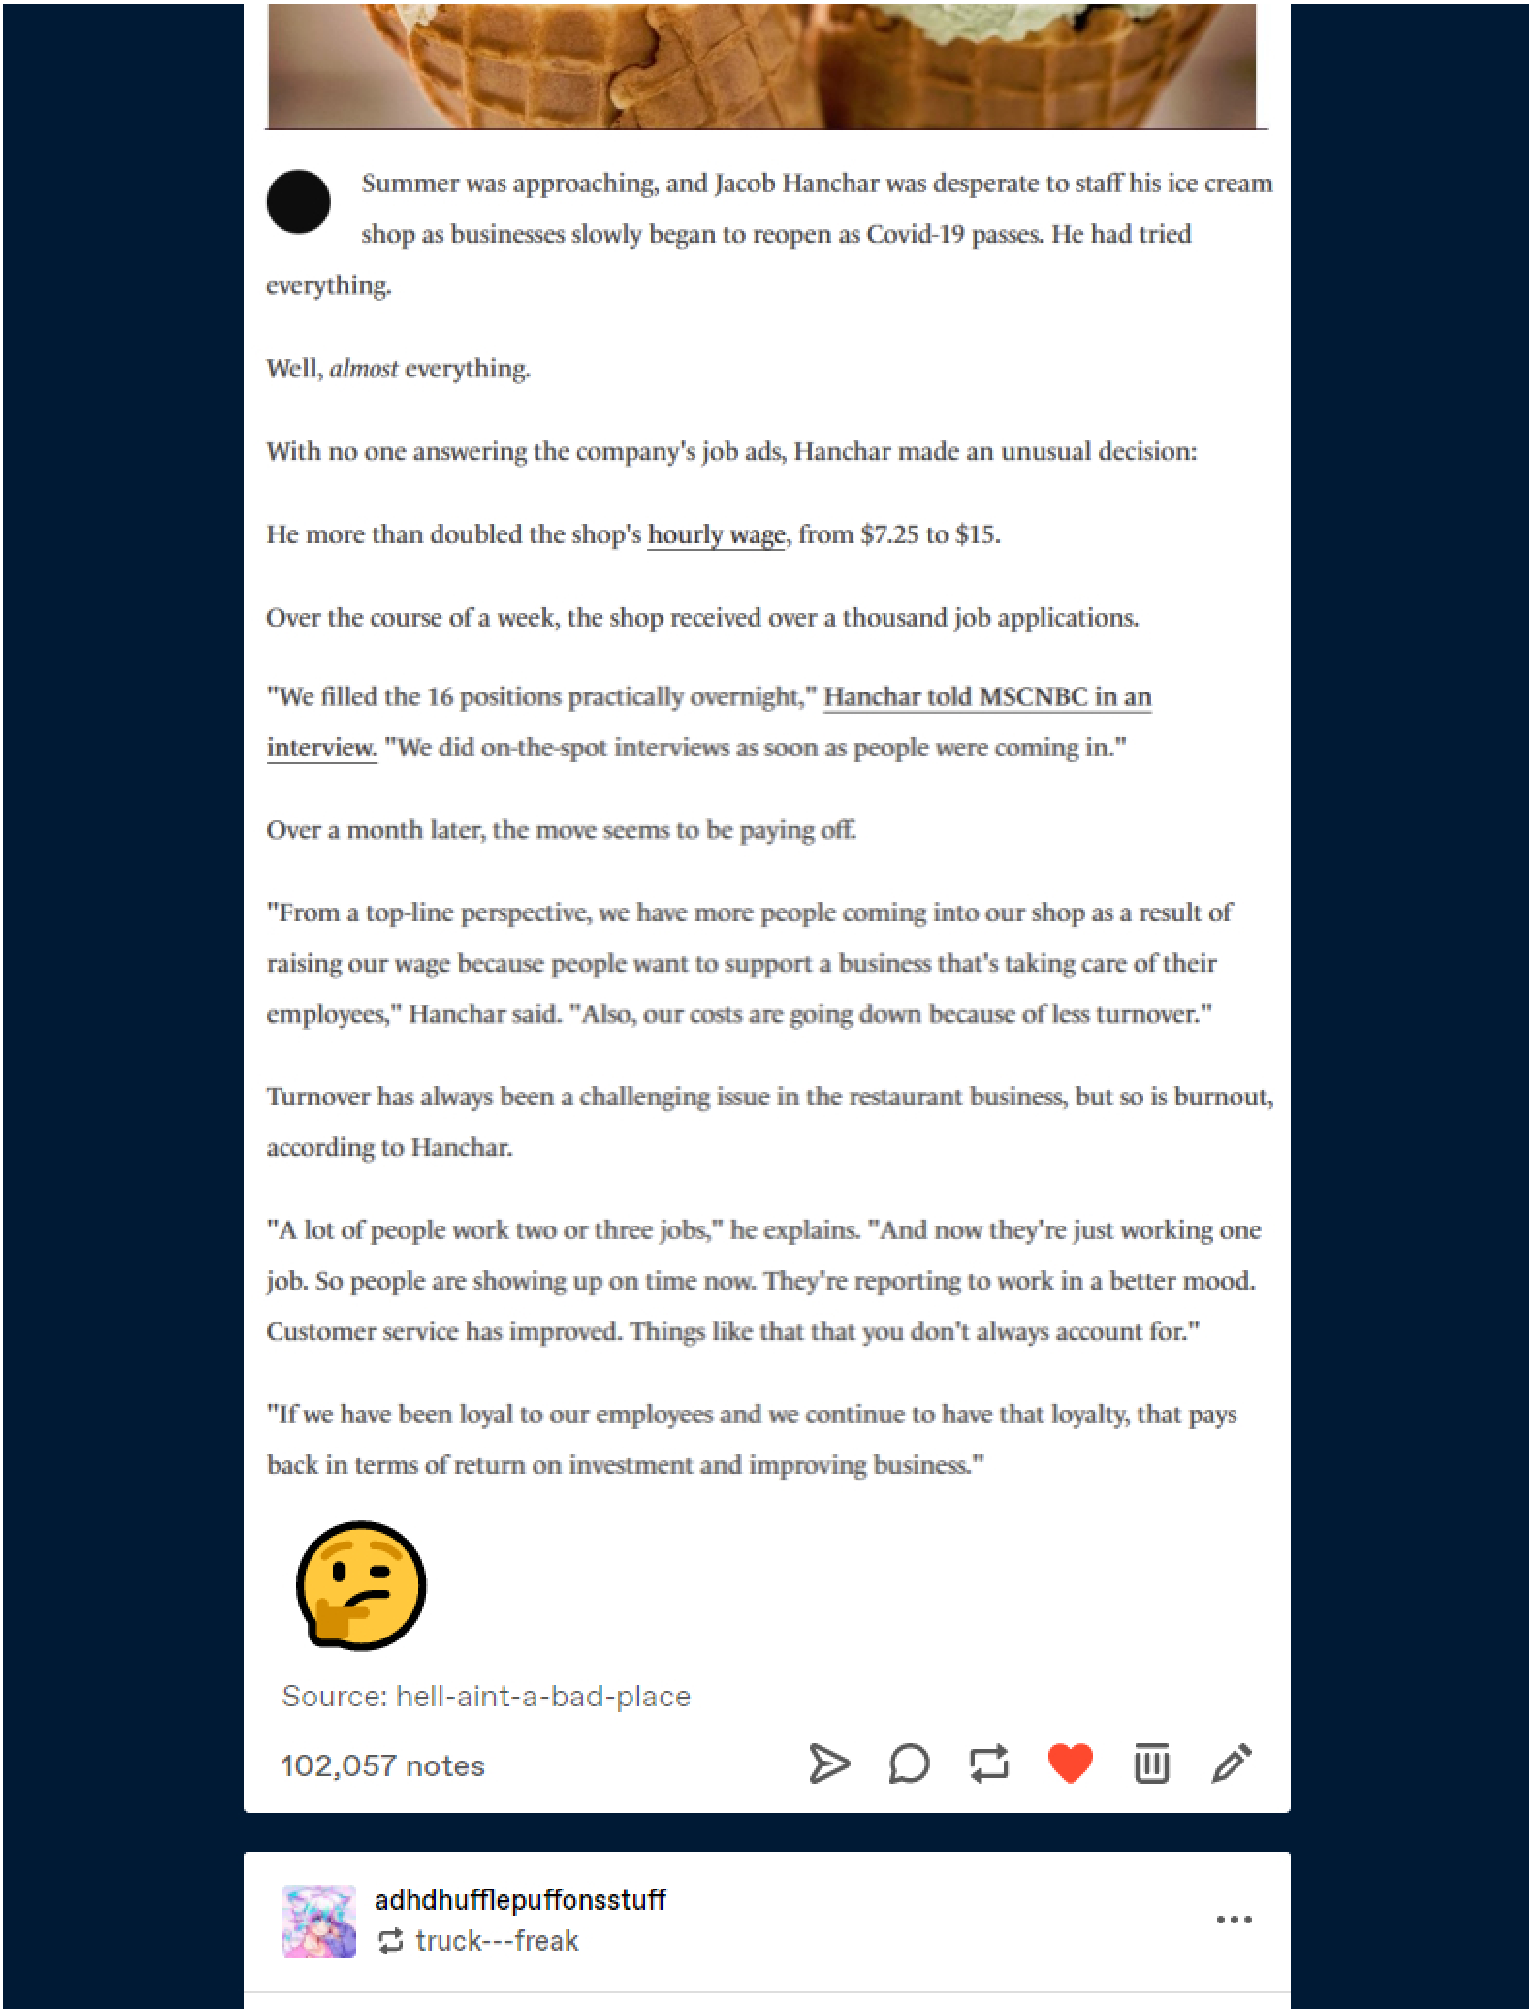
CONSCIOUS LEADERSHIP

Desperate for Staff, This Ice Cream Shop Owner Made an Unusual Decision. It's a Lesson in Emotional Intelligence

Jacob Hanchar knew his ice cream shop wouldn't survive much longer without new workers. So he took a big risk.

BY JUSTIN BARISO @JUSTINJBARISO



Summer was approaching, and Jacob Hanchar was desperate to staff his ice cream shop as businesses slowly began to reopen as Covid-19 passes. He had tried everything.

Well, almost everything.

With no one answering the company's job ads, Hanchar made an unusual decision:

He more than doubled the shop's hourly wage, from $7.25 to $15.

Over the course of a week, the shop received over a thousand job applications.

"We filled the 16 positions practically overnight," Hanchar told MSCNBC in an interview. "We did on-the-spot interviews as soon as people were coming in."

Over a month later, the move seems to be paying off.

"From a top-line perspective, we have more people coming into our shop as a result of raising our wage because people want to support a business that's taking care of their employees," Hanchar said. "Also, our costs are going down because of less turnover."

Turnover has always been a challenging issue in the restaurant business, but so is burnout, according to Hanchar.

"A lot of people work two or three jobs," he explains. "And now they're just working one job. So people are showing up on time now. They're reporting to work in a better mood. Customer service has improved. Things like that that you don't always account for."

"If we have been loyal to our employees and we continue to have that loyalty, that pays back in terms of return on investment and improving business."

The city is coming back. If you're here, you can feel it. There have been a few shock headlines that suggest otherwise. And there seem to be some tabloid reporters wading through normal life in search of crime, vagrancy, and drug use. But all the pessimism in the world can't prevent the inevitable. New York is coming back. The parks are alive. The streets are once again filling with random encounters. And if you want an outside table at your favorite restaurant on a Tuesday night, you better plan ahead. Because everyone else has the same idea. The energy is returning, only now it has a slightly different flavor. Because it's the energy of a comeback. The city has been through so much this past sixteen months, and the suffering continues in many forms. Many are still grieving their loved ones. The lights of Broadway haven't quite returned. And the small business situation is heartbreaking, so many good people are being crushed beneath a mountain of unpaid rent. New York is hurting. Nobody is denying that. But New York is coming back, because the people are still here. The soul of New York was never skyscrapers. It's people. This tiny dot on the globe has more languages, more religions, more ideas, more dreams, and more stories than anywhere else on earth. There's eight million people here, and all of them are different. But everyone has one thing in common: they're here for a reason. They love New York. And they're going to bring it back. This month I'll be partnering with my friend NEWYORKNICO on a series called #comebackNYC. For years Nico has been documenting interesting New Yorkers. He calls himself the 'unofficial talent scout' of New York, but I think that's too simplistic of a label. More than anything, these people are his friends. He cares about everyone he features. And they care about him. Nico has been introducing me to some of his favorite New Yorkers, and during the month of June I'll be sharing their stories. It's been a very meaningful series for me personally. This is such an important chapter in the life of the city, and it's a privilege to be a part of this moment. #comebacknyc

Burdened with glorious purpose.

Americans.................... please understand that the brand of Christianity you grew up surrounded by is basically an outgrowth of a weird extremist cult movement (Puritanism). You gotta stop making generalizations that Christianity never/doesn't ever refer back to original languages, etc. Like, I know you guys (myself included here) grew up in a country where the predominant type of Christianity is basically weird, backwater evangelical extremism, but that's not the whole picture. Please read Twelfth Night and look at how Shakespeare portrayed the Puritan character Malvolio. Use your brain, I'm just. I'm begging you. You all think you sound so genius and clever but you just sound like Americans spouting off about stuff that only applies to Americans, which is why the rest of the world despises us passionately for the most part.

justcallmekeamy Follow

dont worry… we despise each other too

if I'm correct a large reason why the Americas were colonized by English settlers was because they wanted to practice Puritanism? we were taught in school that it was because they were "persecuted" by the English Church and I'm not sure how much of that is true and how much is bullshit propaganda. If I'm correct then it's really unfortunate a brood of sniveling, entitled assholes made their way over here on a ship and bred more sniveling, entitled assholes

if anyone has some good reads or insight on the history of Puritanism and other Christian church denominations I'm highly interested

TVA: We are justified in imprisoning, torturing, enslaving, threatening, and terrorizing people because we are the good guys and our victims are the bad guys. This definitely isn't a justification used by every committer of atrocities ever.

TVA: Loki killed so he is Bad. The culture of his society and the context of his actions aren't relevant. Murder is bad.

Also TVA: Do what we want or we will kill you. No we're not murdering hypocrites who project our flaws onto others. You're a murdering hypocrite who project their flaws onto others

Also TVA: We, an entire organization dedicated to murdering people we have unilaterally decided don't have the right to exist, are definitely the moral authorities here.

Also TVA: Yes we specifically decided to create a timeline in which the Snap and Nazism happened. But that's ok because we did it. And we're the good guys. Therefore everything we do is good. Because this is the MCU where now you're a designated good guy based on who you are not what you do.

Disney: Yeah the soulless ~~corporation~~ organization that wants to control everything are the good guys. :))) You should definitely root against the person killing agents of an organization dedicated to stripping all realities of free will and exterminating and enslaving people who they deem unworthy of existence. Also make sure to check out our movie about how puppy murder is ok sometimes. What are "morality and basic human decency"???? Is it something we can sell to people?

A question for Jumblr: is it permitted to write in a study Torah? Like https://www.amazon.com/Torah-Modern-Commentary-English-Opening/dp/0807400556/ref=sr_1_13?ie=UTF8&qid=1530055952&sr=8-13&keywords=torah

One of these things?

I have a Torah I found at Goodwill when I first started seriously considering conversion, and my aunt recently gave me my uncle's Torah (which happens to be the same edition as the one I was using). I want to donate the Goodwill one to my temple for the next Judaism 101 class, to be given to someone who can't necessarily afford materials, and I want to write in the front cover (if it's permitted) where I got it and why, with the additional note that when the student is able to afford a Torah of their own, I would like them to pass this one on to another Jew in need, so that in this way we can have an item with a history and continuity that converts often don't have, and we can all be taught.

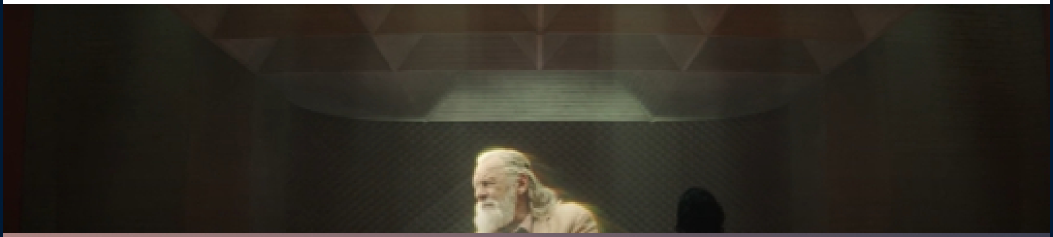
Mourning Frigga



Hearing Odin say that he loves him.

Realizing that he and Thor are still together and talking. And that they watched Odin die together. For one small, incremental moment, he wasn't alone in something awful.

The death of his parents is so painful that he has to look away from the screen. Then quickly looks back up upon hearing Thor talk.

Maybe you're not so bad after all brother,

maybe not

Loki laughs quietly, because Thor gets him. And Loki feels that for the first time in a very long time. Then Thor offers to hug him, and Loki smiles. And laughs. The first, genuine smile and laugh that we've gotten from him since Thor 1 (at this point in the timeline):

And by the Norns, they hugged. You can freakin see it in his face.

And then he goes forward, because surely, surely there is more good memories like these here. Of course there are, he and Thor are finally talking. Their parents may be dead, but Thor's love means so much to him it's the first thing that breaks Loki out of his stoic mask.

Look at him, still hopeful, still wanting.

And then Thanos makes an on-screen appearance.

And then Loki realizes, no. There are no more good memories here.

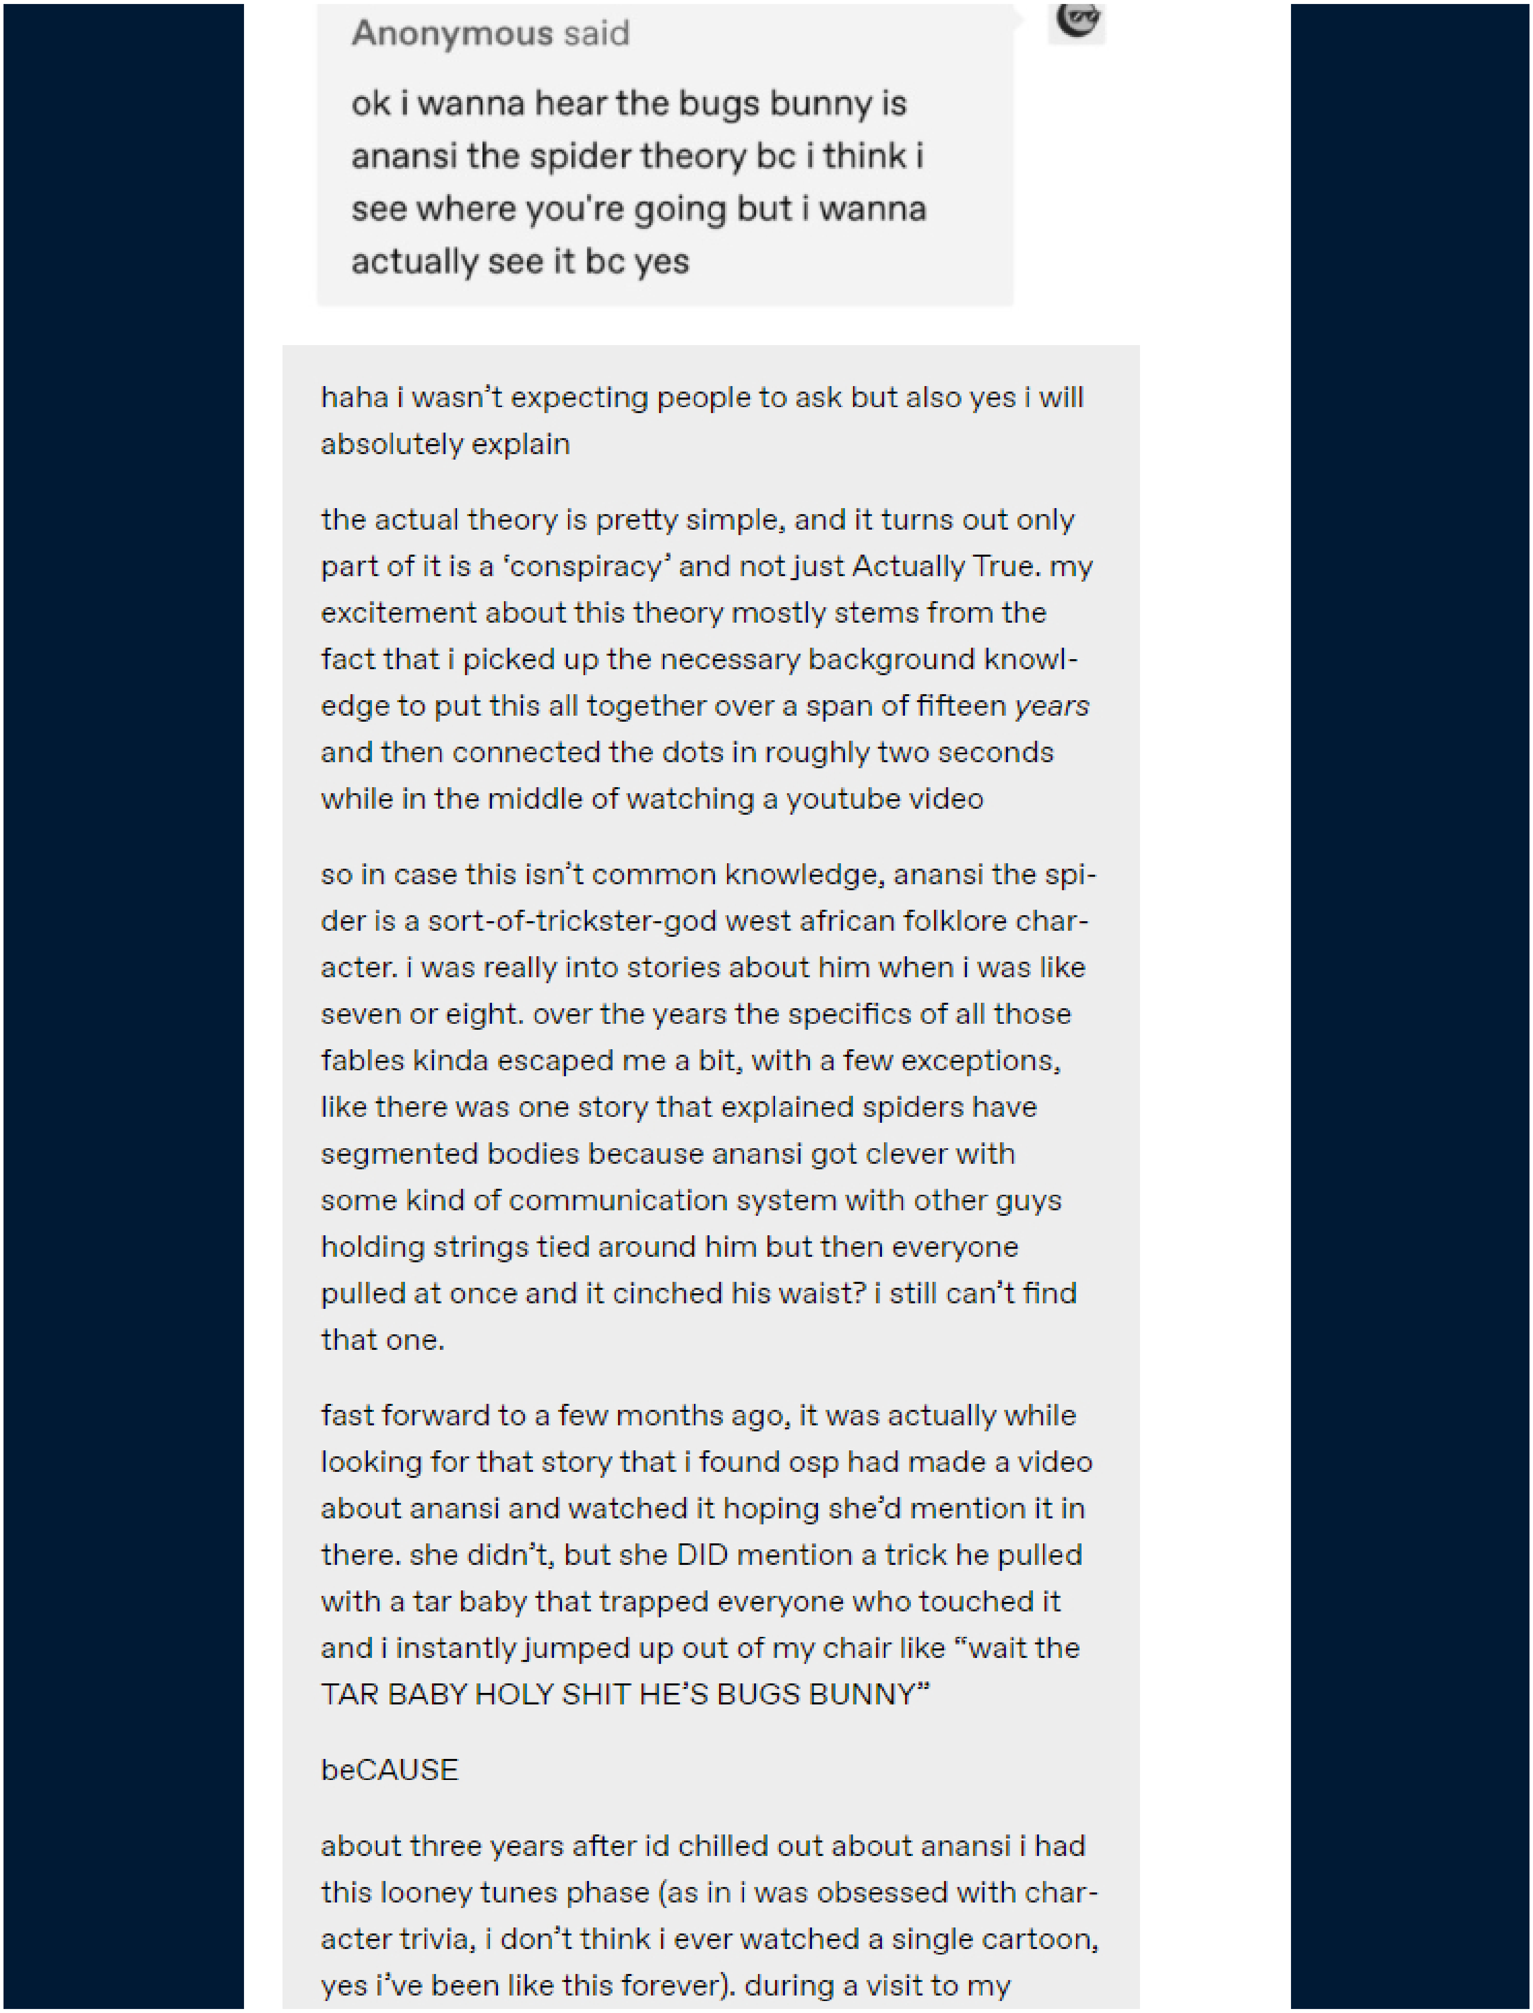
Anonymous asked:

Wait what’s this about a bugs bunny conspiracy?

mumblesplash answered:

Anonymous said

what’s the bugs bunny theory topsy



Anonymous said

ok i wanna hear the bugs bunny is anansi the spider theory bc i think i see where you're going but i wanna actually see it bc yes

haha i wasn't expecting people to ask but also yes i will absolutely explain the actual theory is pretty simple, and it turns out only part of it is a 'conspiracy' and not just Actually True. my excitement about this theory mostly stems from the fact that i picked up the necessary background knowledge to put this all together over a span of fifteen years and then connected the dots in roughly two seconds while in the middle of watching a youtube video so in case this isn't common knowledge, anansi the spider is a sort-of-trickster-god west african folklore character. i was really into stories about him when i was like seven or eight. over the years the specifics of all those fables kinda escaped me a bit, with a few exceptions, like there was one story that explained spiders have segmented bodies because anansi got clever with some kind of communication system with other guys holding strings tied around him but then everyone pulled at once and it cinched his waist? i still can't find that one.

fast forward to a few months ago, it was actually while looking for that story that i found osp had made a video about anansi and watched it hoping she'd mention it in there. she didn't, but she DID mention a trick he pulled with a tar baby that trapped everyone who touched it and i instantly jumped up out of my chair like "wait the TAR BABY HOLY SHIT HE'S BUGS BUNNY"

beCAUSE

about three years after id chilled out about anansi i had this looney tunes phase (as in i was obsessed with character trivia, i don't think i ever watched a single cartoon, yes i've been like this forever). during a visit to my grandparents' house i found these old books that i THOUGHT were about bugs bunny, but the rabbit in those stories was only ever referred to as 'br'er rabbit' and none of the other looney tunes guys were there. i read the whole thing anyway, and THAT was where i knew the tar baby story from.

i checked to make sure, turns out br'er rabbit was in fact the americanized incarnation of anansi the spider, one of the most enduring folklore figures brought over from africa, probably in no small part due to his penchant for outwitting and escaping ~~white people~~ villains through resourcefulness and trickery (iirc some br'er rabbit stories were actually instructional to a certain extent) so the anansi → br'er rabbit thing is just true, that's not a guess, but i couldn't confirm for sure whether or not bugs bunny is based on br'er rabbit. he certainly shares a lot of traits, and i've seen bugs compared to other tricksters before, but this seems like too much of a coincidence not to be directly connected. i thought something like 'well-known cartoon character bugs bunny is Literally a spider god' would be an easily searchable fun fact or at least one of those things some nerd has written an article on, but i barely found anything?

and like it doesn't necessarily mean anything but i can't help but wonder if that has anything to do with why his name is bugs, like come on ok but can we just talk about abberations cuz like they're intelligent and adults but their minds are inscrutable to humans. so like does that mean you can consent to sex with them? cuz you're on wayyyy different levels of intelligence? but also they're an adult with the capacity to give and understand consent? but could a normal sentient's mind comprehend consenting to sex with them? help me out here i'm confused.

thedungeonofbaddecisions

If both parties are sentient, its just interspecies sex, stop trying to overcomplicate things. Just because one species is better at calculus does not complicate the less intelligent species' capacity for consent.

drizzlearcher

true but in most fiction an abberation's mind functions in a completely different way from a non-abberation. essentially what i meant to point out was the potential issue of blue and orange morality

thedungeonofbaddecisions

Are you seriously trying to start a philosophical debate on this post?

Like, I admire the chutzpah, dude, but it doesn't matter if one species has a totally alien concept of everything. If both parties know what they want, communicate what they want, and agree with each other on it, its fully informed consent on each side and therefore just regular interspecies sex. Sentience is sentience, even if the way it manifests is wildly different.

honestly? i was drunk out of my mind both times i saw this post. also you make a very good point and are correct that flavors of sentience aside, as long as both parties are sentient and consent it's fine. i apologize for drunk me's ramblings.

That being said, this is the Dungeon of Bad Decisions. As in, there are no good choices made here.

Also my IRL dump stat was probably Wisdom. I definitely have at least a -2 to Perception and Insight, I can tell you that. Forethought is not ny specialty.

definitelybeholderrpgideas Follow

Okay but this does raise the question of hyper-inteligent races with incredibly long lifespans. For instance, if a horny bard was trying to screw a god, from the bard's perspective they're both mature adults. However, by the standards of the god who has lived for millions of years and has a mind the size of a galaxy, the bard may be just a child. So, assuming the god consents, what would the implications of that be?

Now if you excuse me I need to go bleach my brain and stop thinking about this.

jabberwockypie Follow

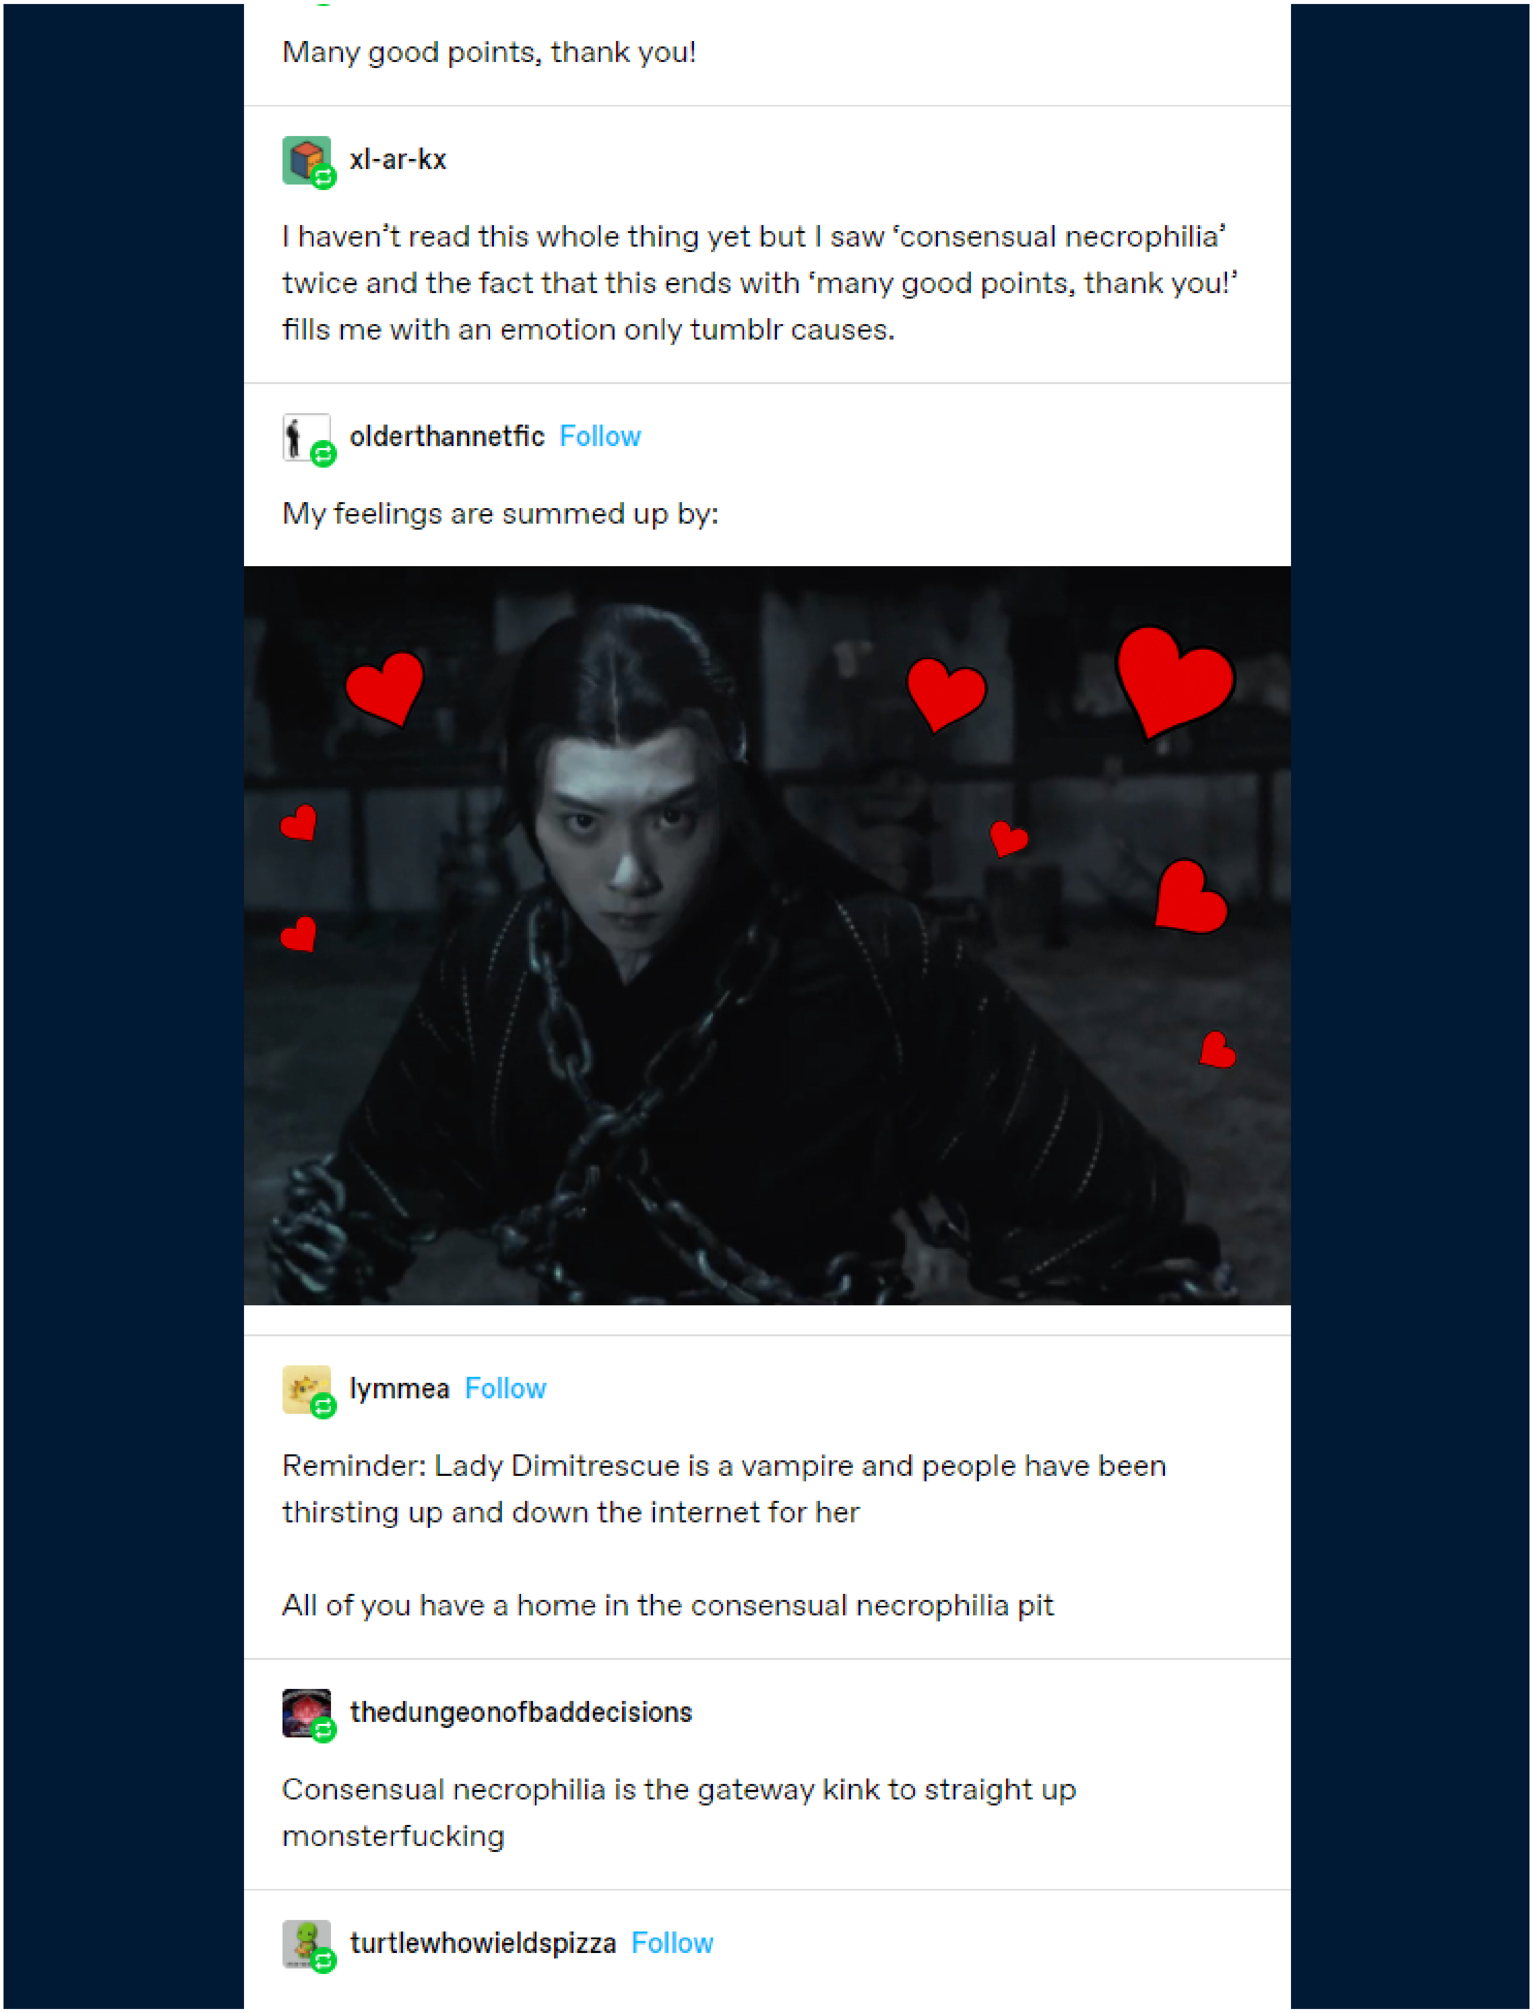
Would they be a child, though? I mean, sure by the standards of the god's species, they might be - look at this little bard who can't even bend the cosmos to their whim! (or however "adulthood" is measured with this type of deity) - but the bard is NOT a member of the god's species. presumably if they're that smart, they understand that

I would assume that if the bard is considered an adult by the standards of their own species, - eg, physical sexual maturity, psychological maturity, can understand any of the consequences and risks involved (magical/celestial STIs, pregnancy, any dangers inherent to transdimensional extraplanar sex, is there telepathy stuff going on with this god?, possible emotional risks, etc), etc - then it's fine.

To put it a different way (because I'm less familiar with DnD elves and how their aging works), Tolkien elves don't reach adulthood until age 100. You wouldn't have sex with a 25 year old elf - they'd be a little kid, even though having sex with a consenting 25 year old human is fine. But an adult human and an adult elf - by the standards of their own species - can both give meaningful consent to sex/marriage. (I mean, look, Luthien's dad fucked an angel.)

I think it'd be good to talk about it first, but that's just a good policy in general with sex and boundaries.

thedungeonofbaddecisions



Many good points, thank you!

It is deeply, deeply beneficial to TERFs if the only characteristic of TERF ideology you will recognize as wrong, harmful, or problematic is "they hate trans women".

TERF ideology is an expansive network of extremely toxic ideas, and the more of them we accept and normalize, the easier it becomes for the more of them we accept and normalize, the easier it becomes for them to fly under the radar and recruit new TERFs. The closer they get to turning the tide against all trans people, trans women included.

Case in point: In 2014-2015, I fell headlong into radical feminism. I did not know it was called radical feminism at the time, but I also didn't know what was wrong with radical feminism in the first place. I didn't see a problem with it.

I was a year deep into this shit when people I had been following, listening to, and looking up to finally said they didn't think trans women were women. It was only then that I unfollowed those people, specifically; but I continued to follow other TERFs-who-didn't-say-they-were-TERFs. I continued ingesting and spreading their ideas-for years after.

If TERFs "only target trans women" and "only want trans women gone", if that's the one and only problem with their ideology and if that's the only way we'll define them, we will inevitably miss a vast majority of the quiet beliefs that support their much louder hatred of trans women.

As another example: the trans community stood relatively united when TERFs and conservatives targeted our right to use the correct restroom, citing the "dangers" of trans women sharing space with cis women. But when they began targeting Lost Little Girls and Confused Lesbians and trotting detransitioners out to raise a panic about trans men, virtually the only people speaking up about it were other transmascs. Now we see a rash of anti-trans healthcare bills being passed in the US, and they're hurting every single one of us.

When you refuse to call a TERF a TERF just because they didn't specifically say they hate trans women, when you refuse to think critically about a TERF belief just because it's not directly related to trans women, you are actively helping TERFs spread their influence and build credibility.

rickiflannel Follow

what is some TERF ideology we should be on the look out for?

nothorses Follow

This isn't comprehensive, but I'll do my best.

TERFs are, first and foremost, radical feminists. Radical feminism is essentially second-wave feminism without the intersectionality brought in by third-wave feminism. It believes that patriarchy is at fault for the oppression of women, but sees this in a very strict, binary way: women are the oppressed, and men are the oppressors.

TERFs use this to justify their specific brand of transphobia. This idea, among others, is essential in supporting that transphobia.

I'll try to outline some of those ideas, and some of the logical thruoughlines they use:

1. Women are uniquely oppressed, and always in danger. Womanhood- or the experience of being a woman- is defined by oppression, misogyny, and Being In Danger.
2. Women are particularly in danger in the presence of, and in relationships with, men. Spaces that exclude men are essential to preserving the safety of women.
3. Socialization: men are raised to support patriarchy, while women are raised to be subjugated by it. Men have no motive to unlearn these lessons, so all men are inherently more corrupted by these lessons than women.
4. Relationships with men are therefore inherently (more likely to be) abusive, and relationships with women are inherently safe(er).
5. Sex, in particular, is more often exploitative than not. Only some kinds of sex are not exploitative. Many kinds of sex that we think are consensual, or that people say are consensual, are either rape or proto-rape.
6. Exchanging money for sex is inherently rape/exploitation/non-consensual in some way.
7. As women who deny men access to them, lesbians are The Most Oppressed and also The Most Endangered. They must be protected at all costs.
8. Because so many women have been raped by men with penises, both men and penises are inherently traumatic to A Lot Of Women.
9. Many lesbians will naturally have an aversion to relationships with trans women because of this. Trans women who argue against this "genital preference" are potential rapists trying to infiltrate lesbian spaces to hurt and take advantage of women.
10. Men will always try to invade "women's spaces" to take advantage of women, endanger them, and strip away their resources both for personal gain/pleasure, and in service of upholding the patriarchy.
11. If we allow men to say they are women, they will invade those spaces and hurt "real" women. Men who say they are women are dangerous, and must be excluded and punished.

12. Men may try to obfuscate labels and terminology to "define women out of existence" or otherwise cause confusion, which they can manipulate to further their infiltration.
13. Women are all miserable with their bodies, cursed with the pressure to reproduce and have sex with men.
14. Women are all miserable with their genders, forced as they are to ensure the overwhelming and constant suffering that is patriarchy.
15. Women will attempt to escape this misery and pressure by "becoming men". This is cowardly, but understandable; a tragic but inevitable result of patriarchy. These women must be saved.
16. Some women who try to escape patriarchy are doing it out of self-interest; they are betraying women by becoming men, and contributing to their oppression. These women must be punished.
17. Bio-essentialism: women are oppressed specifically because of their bodies and ability to reproduce. This is an inherent and defining part of womanhood. Nobody can claim womanhood without this experience, everyone who has had this experience is a woman.
18. Women's bodies are all beautiful and perfect because they are women's bodies. If the womanliness of them is tampered with, they become less valuable. Men's bodies are gross and undesirable symbols of patriarchy.
19. Testosterone makes people violent, aggressive, irrational, and angry. Estrogen makes people calm, kind, and happy.
20. Men can never understand women's bodies as well as other women do.
21. People can be attracted to other people on the basis of "sex" alone. This is inherent, immutable, and unquestionable.
22. Men are sexual animals who inherently and unavoidably find lots of bad things sexually arousing. Because "youth" is attractive, many men find young girls and children attractive, and will try to take advantage of them. Misogynistic control/power over women, hurting women, and even rape are also inherently sexually appealing to men.
23. "Gender" is meaningless; it's founded in misogynistic stereotypes about men and women, and when you remove the stereotypes, there's nothing left at all. Only binary "sex" is real, because that's what patriarchy (and biology) is based on.
24. Manhood is itself a toxic, oppressive, inherently corrupting concept. Anyone who participates in manhood is corrupt and immoral; who would choose to be the oppressor?

25. Masculinity is defined only by hating women, having power, and being aggressive, violent, and controlling (etc.)
26. Patriarchy doesn't just target women, but femininity as a whole, for its association with women.
27. Patriarchy doesn't just reward men, but masculinity, as it rejects femininity. People who reject femininity and embrace masculinity are rewarded by the patriarchy.

Some of these ideas are contradictory, but they lead to the same conclusions. Some of them lead to similar conclusions, many of which take very little further nudging to push into more dogmatic ideas.

This is exactly why we need to understand all of these paths into TERF ideology- and more.

In fact, the vast majority of the points on this list- particularly the beginnings of their logic- can be very easily swallowed while still holding that trans women are women, and trans men are men.

That's what TIRFs (trans-inclusive radical feminists) are, and they're still incredibly dangerous. TIRF ideology normalizes these points, making it far easier for TERFs to recruit; even if TIRFs themselves try to be aggressively anti-TERF.

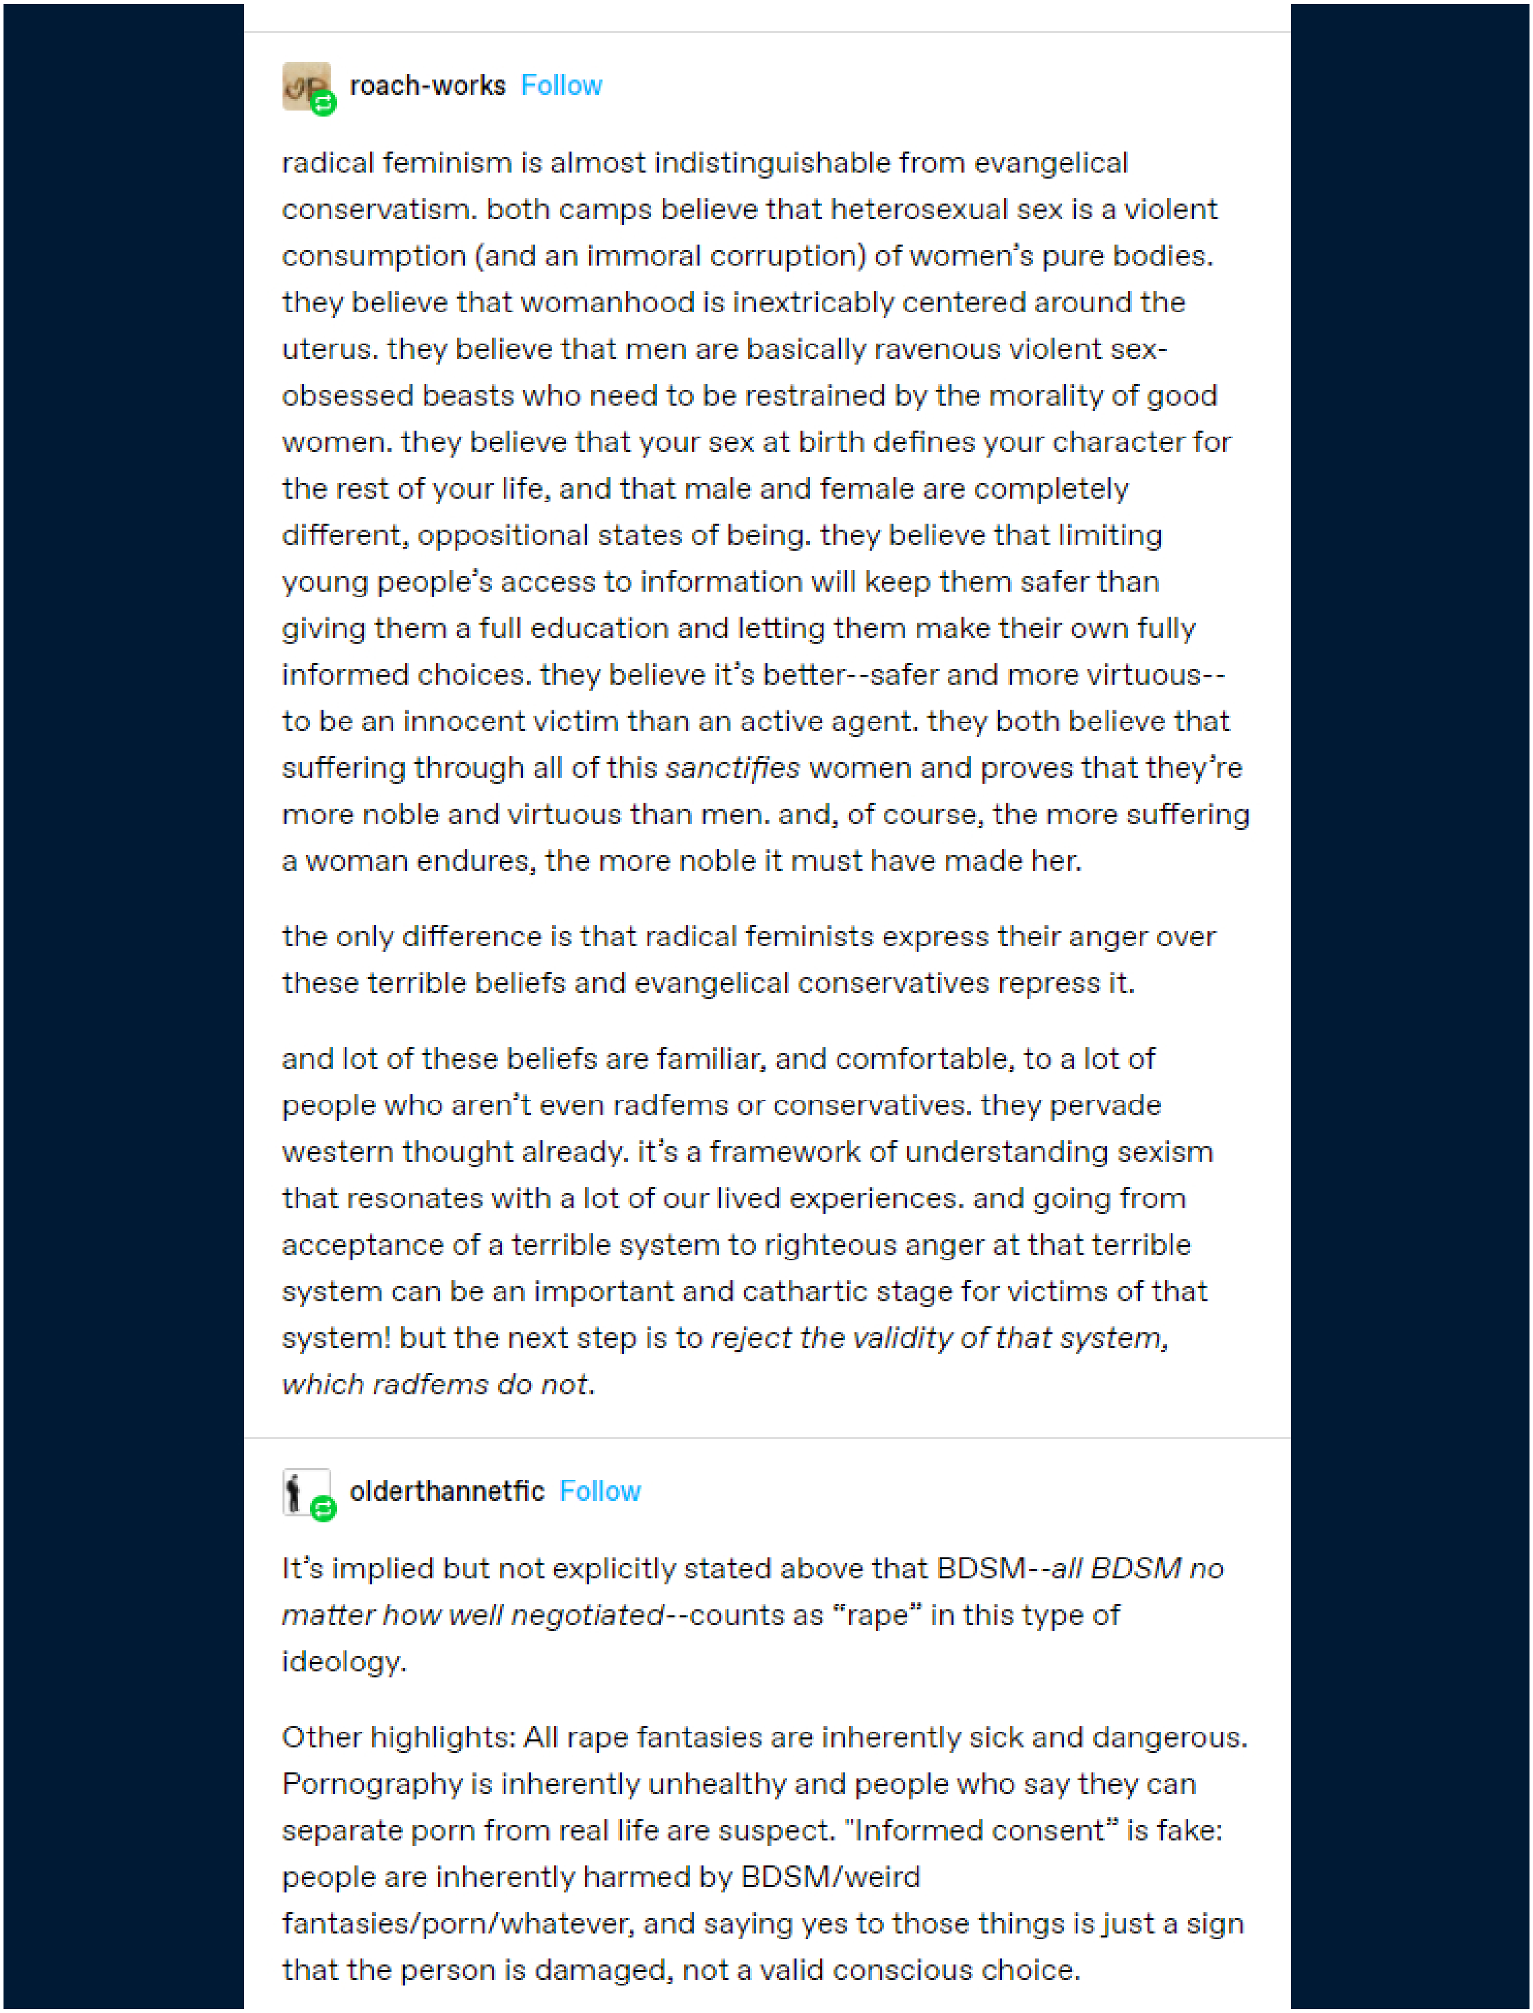
Again, this isn't comprehensive, and it would take a long time and a lot of words to cover every flaw and danger in every line of reasoning here.

But remember how these things work; even if some of them begin with a grain of truth, even if some of them are true- especially if you define the words they contain differently- be wary of them.

selancastsvalor

It's important to note how sex-negative they can be, and how in some circles this leads to a belief that being a lesbian is the only way one can liberate oneself from the abuse of men. They see sexual orientation as a choice to be made for one's safety, or a political act--not something based on genuine attraction. They also sometimes push the idea of the "gold-star lesbian"--that is, a lesbian who's never been with a man--as the ideal. If you're a bisexual? Disgusting, don't interact.

It's... sadly common to see on dating sites.



roach-works Follow

radical feminism is almost indistinguishable from evangelical conservatism. both camps believe that heterosexual sex is a violent consumption (and an immoral corruption) of women’s pure bodies. they believe that womanhood is inextricably centered around the uterus. they believe that men are basically ravenous violent sex-obsessed beasts who need to be restrained by the morality of good women. they believe that your sex at birth defines your character for the rest of your life, and that male and female are completely different, oppositional states of being. they believe that limiting young people’s access to information will keep them safer than giving them a full education and letting them make their own fully informed choices. they believe it’s better--safer and more virtuous--to be an innocent victim than an active agent. they both believe that suffering through all of this sanctifies women and proves that they’re more noble and virtuous than men. and, of course, the more suffering a woman endures, the more noble it must have made her.

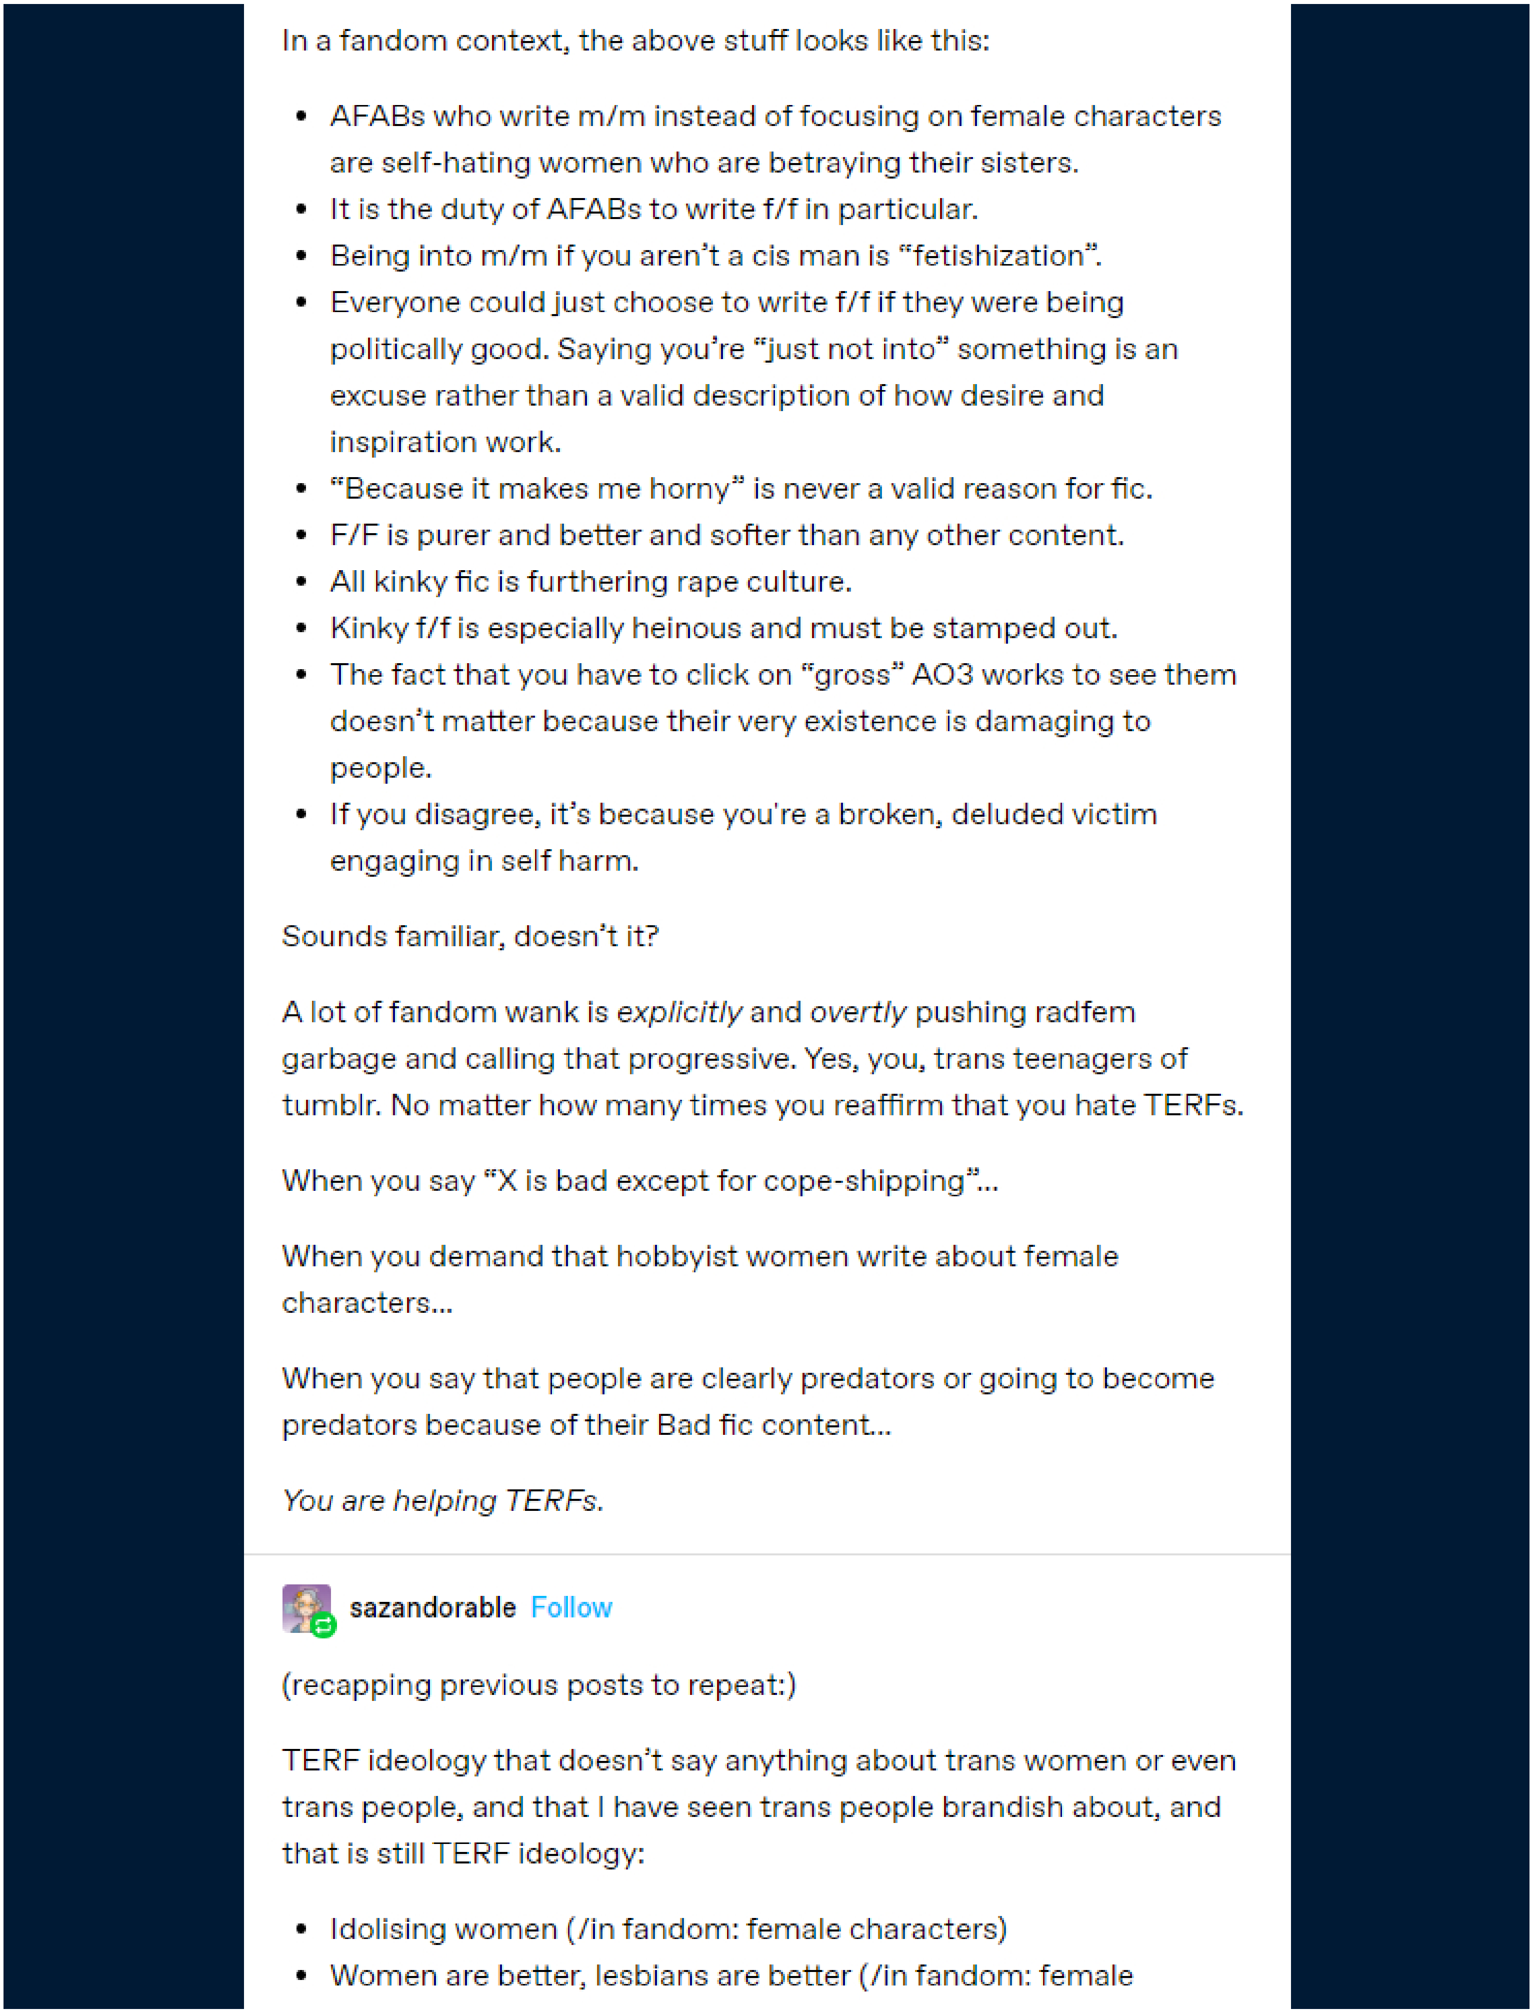
the only difference is that radical feminists express their anger over these terrible beliefs and evangelical conservatives repress it.

and lot of these beliefs are familiar, and comfortable, to a lot of people who aren’t even radfems or conservatives. they pervade western thought already. it’s a framework of understanding sexism that resonates with a lot of our lived experiences. and going from acceptance of a terrible system to righteous anger at that terrible system can be an important and cathartic stage for victims of that system! but the next step is to reject the validity of that system, which radfems do not.

olderthannetfic Follow

It’s implied but not explicitly stated above that BDSM--all BDSM no matter how well negotiated--counts as “rape” in this type of ideology.

Other highlights: All rape fantasies are inherently sick and dangerous. Pornography is inherently unhealthy and people who say they can separate porn from real life are suspect. "Informed consent” is fake: people are inherently harmed by BDSM/weird fantasies/porn/whatever, and saying yes to those things is just a sign that the person is damaged, not a valid conscious choice.



In a fandom context, the above stuff looks like this:

- AFABs who write m/m instead of focusing on female characters are self-hating women who are betraying their sisters.
- It is the duty of AFABs to write f/f in particular.
- Being into m/m if you aren't a cis man is "fetishization".
- Everyone could just choose to write f/f if they were being politically good. Saying you're "just not into" something is an excuse rather than a valid description of how desire and inspiration work.
- "Because it makes me horny" is never a valid reason for fic.
- F/F is purer and better and softer than any other content.
- All kinky fic is furthering rape culture.
- Kinky f/f is especially heinous and must be stamped out.
- The fact that you have to click on "gross" AO3 works to see them doesn't matter because their very existence is damaging to people.
- If you disagree, it's because you're a broken, deluded victim engaging in self harm.

Sounds familiar, doesn't it?

A lot of fandom wank is explicitly and overtly pushing radfem garbage and calling that progressive. Yes, you, trans teenagers of tumblr. No matter how many times you reaffirm that you hate TERFs.

When you say "X is bad except for cope-shipping"...

When you demand that hobbyist women write about female characters...

When you say that people are clearly predators or going to become predators because of their Bad fic content...

You are helping TERFs.

(recapping previous posts to repeat:)

TERF ideology that doesn't say anything about trans women or even trans people, and that I have seen trans people brandish about, and that is still TERF ideology:

- Idolising women (/in fandom: female characters)
- Women are better, lesbians are better (/in fandom: female characters and f/f)

- This sometimes comes through very innocuous speech like “lesbians are smarter, that’s why they’re attracted to women only” or “this female character is too smart to be straight” (gender-essentialist, sexist, biphobic!)
- All women understand, love and support each other
- Disinterest or dislike for a woman is strictly caused by sexism and misogyny (the girlboss phenomenon). (/in fandom: the idea that the absence of content about a female character or a f/f ship is strictly a sign of sexism/misogyny/lesbophobia)
- Women are pure and soft, infantilising women (/in fandom: you cannot write dark content involving female characters, depicting a female character as anything else than perfect is sexism and misogyny)
- Lesbians are pure and soft, infantilising lesbians (in fandom: you cannot write dark or PWP femslash, depicting a wlw as anything else than perfect is lesbophobia)
- Leading to: you can never be abused or raped by a woman, lesbian relationships are never abusive or unhealthy (normalising abuse, denying support)
- As well as acephobia, with the implication that sex is a matter of morality, purity and choice, and that’s it’s more moral to depict characters in an non-sexual relationship, as opposed to asexuality and sex-repulsion being just an uncontrollable and morally-neutral orientation and feeling
- Misandry, including casual misandry like “ew men are gross”
- Leading to: All men are abusive and rapists, of course you got raped, you shouldn’t date men, what did you expect? (normalising abuse, victim-blaming, retraumatising, denying support)
- As well as the concept that a woman is tainted/damaged by her attraction to men or her romantic/sexual history with men. That sound like anything?
- Biphobia, including casual biphobia like “why would you choose to date a gross guy when you could date ~WOMEN~”
- Leading to: general queerphobia, due to the idea that you can choose who to date/have sex with and there is a moral choice to make; yes, the idea that lesbians are better has queerphobic and sexist undertones
- Demonisation of kink as a weapon of patriarchy, including “kink is abusive and cannot be consensual, kink is caused by trauma and victimhood (if only the victimhood of patriarchy), and kink harms pure and innocent women”
- Demonisation of porn, sex work, and sex workers as all weapons of patriarchy, including "no one would choose to be a sex worker, it's inherently degrading and non-consensual (and so it's completely normal that a sex worker would get assaulted and hurt), sex workers need help so they can stop doing sex work altogether"

- Demonisation of any unpure desires or thoughts: if you find women attractive you are predatory to them, if you are a woman and masochistic you are a traumatised and endoctrinated victim of patriarchy, if you have rape fantasies you are not only a victim but a helping agent of the violence of patriarchy. All dark thoughts and desires are wrong and a sign that something is wrong with you, and it's not healthy to indulge them.
- Due to patriarchy, all women suffer and are miserable from being women. This is not only meant to scare trans women away from embracing their identity and transitioning, but also implies: no one could truly want to be a woman (and trans women do not really exist); if you don't want to be a woman, that's normal and a common womanly experience and a sign that you are a woman like us (and trans men do not really exist)
- All men are horrible, violent people due to their upbringing but also testosterone. This is not only meant to scare trans men away from embracing their identity and transitioning, but also implies: no one could truly want to be a man without being a horrible person (and trans men are traitors to women); if you don't want to be a man, that's normal guilt to have because you are inherently a horrible person (but due to your upbringing you can never be a good person and a pure woman).

And finally, one that does talk about trans people, but pretends to be supportive and not transphobic…

- Attraction to and celebration of trans bodies, especially in ways that end up with PIV sex, are predatory/fetishistic/violent to trans people/heteronormative/inflicting the horrible dreaded patriarchy, by the conduct of penis in vagina. (/in fandom: writing smut involving trans characters is fetishistic and predatory, writing dark content involving trans characters is especially heinous)

Note how this returns to the idea that no penis should go in a vagina, because penises bad and vaginas good and even if it involves trans people it's heteronormative patriarchy, and trans people shouldn't be confident with their bodies and use their bodies for sex. I have specifically seen this one a lot from trans people, even though… it's stealthily rooted in radfem bio-essentialism transphobia and is stealthily rooted in radfem bio-essentialism transphobia and is intended to lead you to TERFism.

(Thank you SO MUCH for this post, OP, it's extremely needed and it's very helpful to get it from someone who had the experience of being taken in.)

Ace is a popular nickname for a person who is asexual. It is a phonetic shortening of "asexual", and has lead to some symbolism regarding the playing card "ace". Some asexuals use the ace of spades or ace of hearts to represent their orientation. The ace of hearts is more commonly used for romantic asexuals, whereas an aromantic asexual would generally use the spade.

- ♥ Ace of hearts - romantic asexuals
- ♠ Ace of spades - aromantic asexuals
- ♦ Ace of diamonds - demisexuals and demiromantic aseuxals
- ♣ Ace of clubs - grayasexual and grayromantic asexuals

HOLD UP HOW WAS I NOT AWARE OF THIS

deltasylvania

was gonna leave my comment in the tags but tbh i'm silent enough about this as it is.

seeing stuff like this is so upsetting because these terms were well known and widespread in the ace community but because of exclusionists many people stopped using terms like this because they felt uncomfortable and unsafe.

i loved these terms when i was in highschool, i loved the feeling of community, but i lost that because i didn't feel comfortable openly and proudly calling myself asexual and proudly calling myself asexual.

they've hurt so many people and damaged our community badly and i will never forgive them for that. we deserve to use our own terminology and feel safe within our community.

atasteforsuicidal Follow

sometimes i notice i haven't seen "grace" (grey-ace) in a while and consequently wonder if i made it up.

slenders1ckn3ss Follow

I remember ppl - even other ace ppl - saying the card suit thing was "cringey" and "straight ppl aren't gonna take us seriously" (sounds familiar?) So i guess the community wound up abandoning it. We were also having severe issues at the time with aces being stereotyped as "childish/immature" for associating things like cake, dragons, and space with asexuality, plus in general as most aces just don't "get" allosexual things in media and irl. We were starting to be viewed as ignorant, virginal, childish, losers, etc. I haven't seen an ace-cake thing in a good while now.

This was the infancy of exclusionary influence on us. I didn't realize it did more damage than just closeting us. Whole symbols and terms have been lost. Community has been lost.

cobraonthecob Follow

I remember three-four years ago I got myself into the ace community on Insta, and I came across these terms. People in these circles would talk about cake, space, dragons, and the black ring on the middle finger. Then, a year or two later, ace content fizzled out (I thought it was Insta's algorithm figuring out that I knew all this and didn't bring me the old stuff) and young aces had no idea what any of these were - including the black ring. Finding out young aces had no idea what the black ring meant nearly snapped my heart in two - I proudly wore the black ring, I drew characters with it, and it was my quiet way of communicating to others what my sexuality was. I was baffled at the lack of knowledge - and it turns out that exclusionists got their hands into our community and snuffed us out.

Anyways, we need to bring this back. I thought the card suite thing was cool, it taught people the different ways people can experience attraction, I loved making jokes about preferring cake, I loved wearing the black ring and talking about it with my fellow queer people at my highschool QSA club.

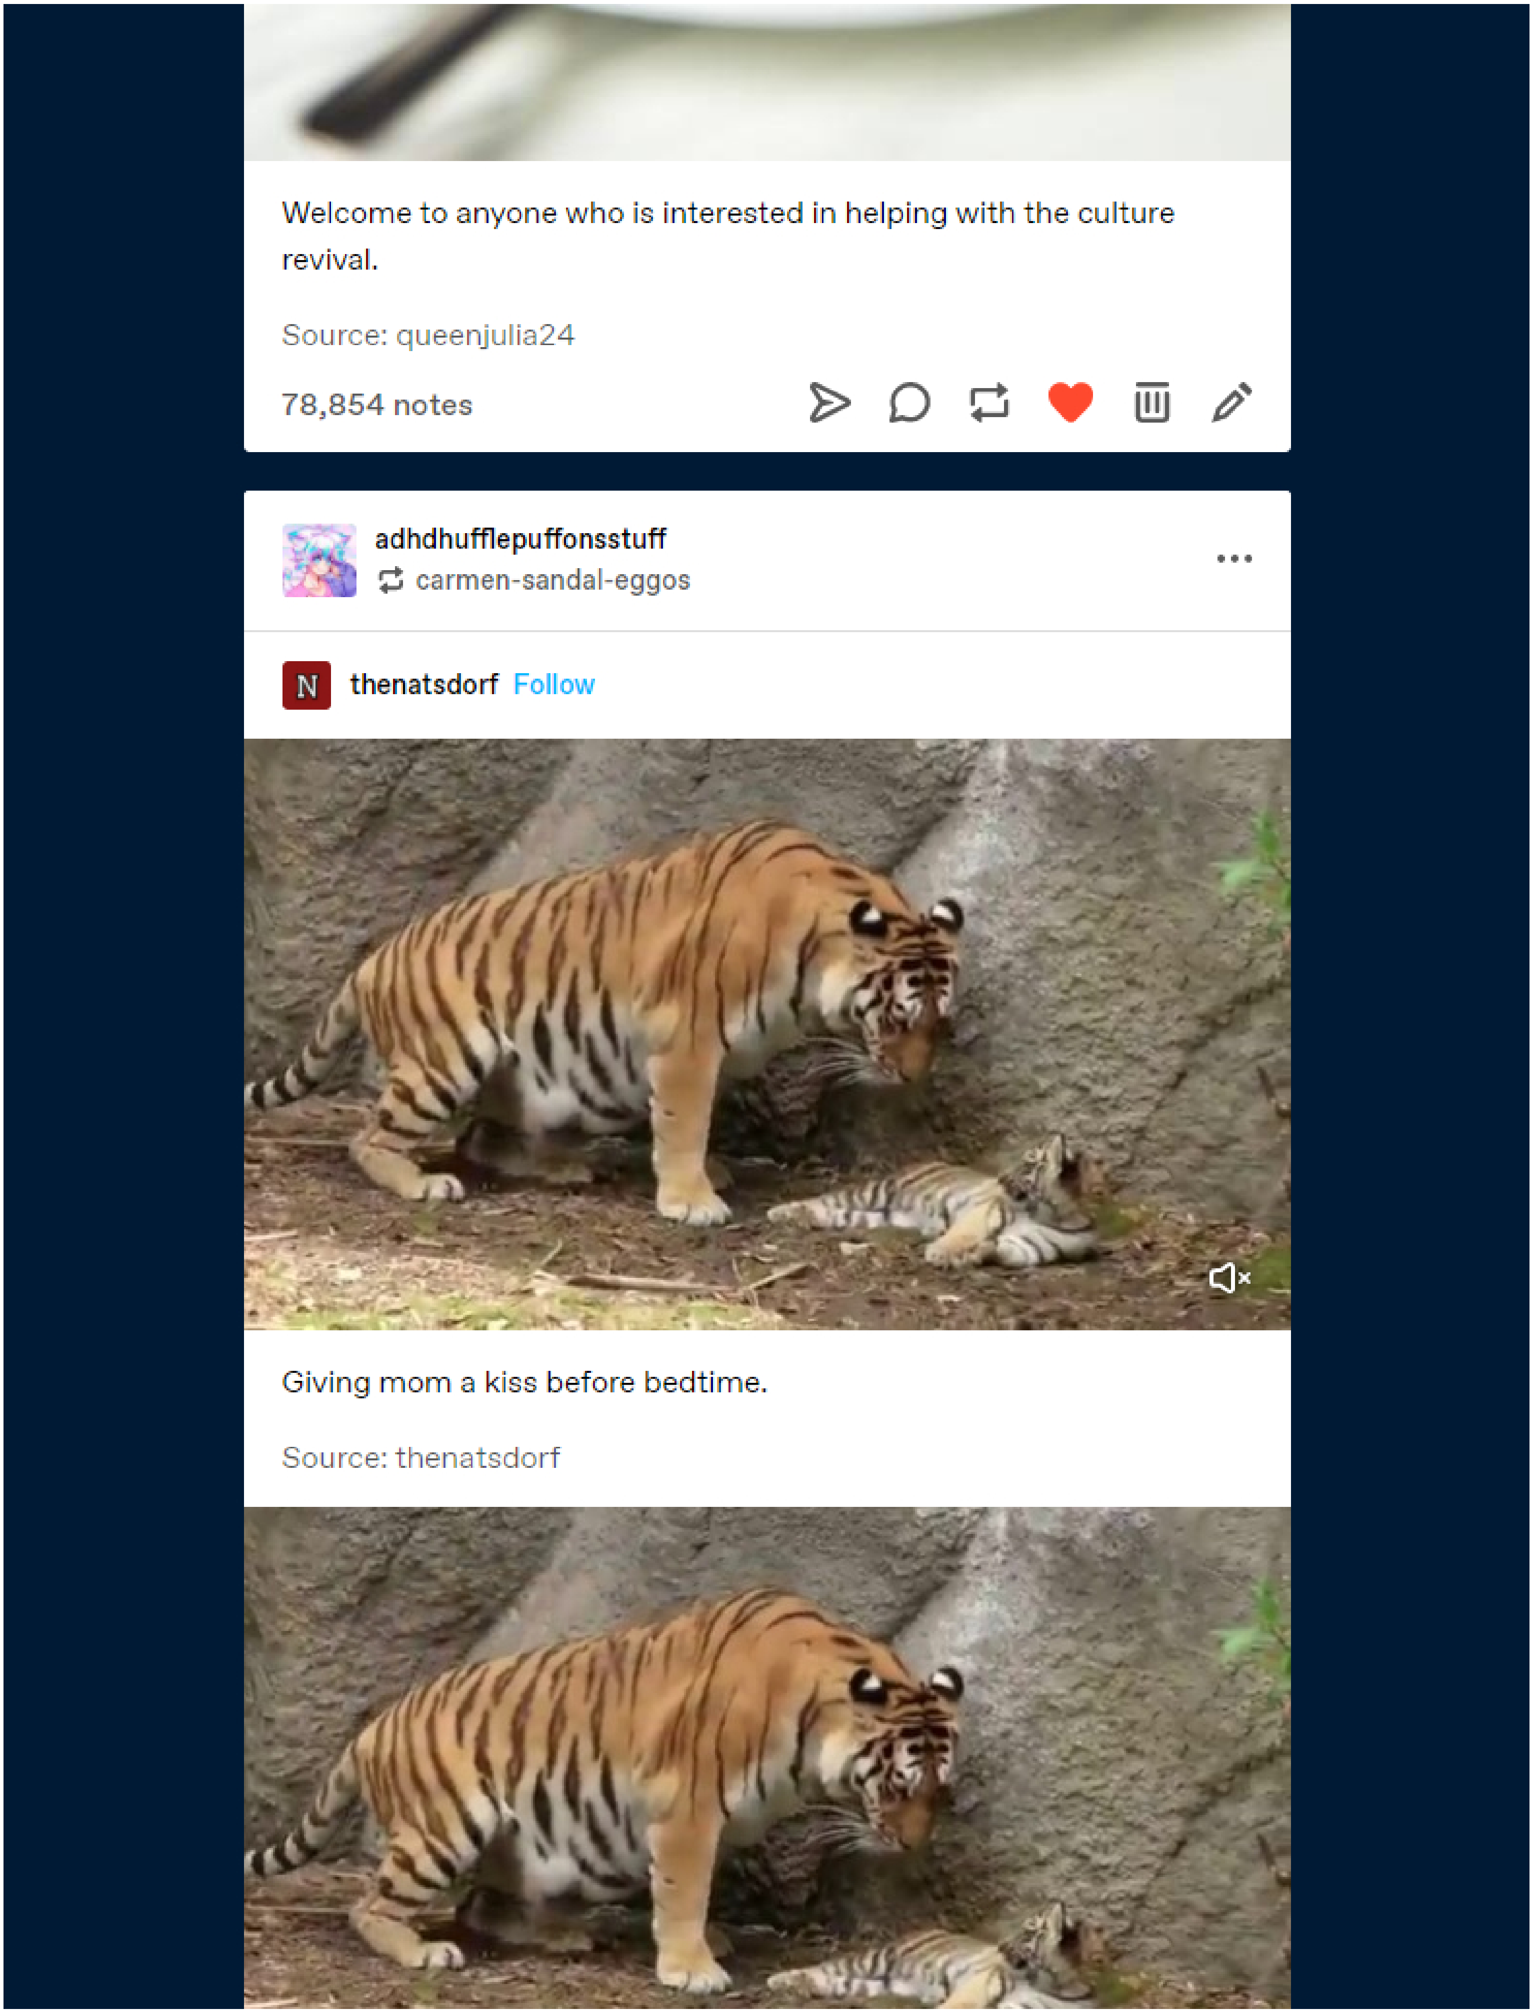
kriss-watches-stuff

I'm sorry, people don't know about the cake or ring anymore? I remember being welcomed with spams of cake gifs, photos, and MS Paint drawings. I also distinctly remember that the block solo ring in the midle was meant as reference to the Ace of Spades (black, solo, middle of card). Only thing I didn't know was that other aces could represent a more refined nuance. Let's see if we can get this all rolling again.



Welcome to anyone who is interested in helping with the culture revival.

“In 1984, when Ruth Coker Burks was 25 and a young mother living in Arkansas, she would often visit a hospital to care for a friend with cancer.

During one visit, Ruth noticed the nurses would draw straws, afraid to go into one room, its door sealed by a big red bag. She asked why and the nurses told her the patient had AIDS.

On a repeat visit, and seeing the big red bag on the door, Ruth decided to disregard the warnings and sneaked into the room.

In the bed was a skeletal young man, who told Ruth he wanted to see his mother before he died. She left the room and told the nurses, who said, "Honey, his mother's not coming. He's been here six weeks. Nobody's coming!"

Ruth called his mother anyway, who refused to come visit her son, who she described as a "sinner" and already dead to her, and that she wouldn't even claim his body when he died.

"I went back in his room and when I walked in, he said, "Oh, momma. I knew you'd come", and then he lifted his hand. And what was I going to do? So I took his hand. I said, "I'm here, honey. I'm here", Ruth later recounted.

Ruth pulled a chair to his bedside, talked to him and held his hand until he died 13 hours later.

After finally finding a funeral home that would his body, and paying for the cremation out of her own savings, Ruth buried his ashes on her family's large plot.

After this first encounter, Ruth cared for other patients. She would take them to appointments, obtain medications, apply for assistance, and even kept supplies of AIDS medications on hand, as some pharmacies would not carry them.

Ruth's work soon became well known in the city and she received financial assistance from gay bars, "They would twirl up a drag show on Saturday night and here'd come the money. That's how we'd buy medicine, that's how we'd pay rent. If it hadn't been for the drag queens, I don't know what we would have done", Ruth said.

Over the next 30 years, Ruth cared for over 1,000 people and buried more than 40 on her family's plot most of whom were gay men whose families would not claim their ashes.

There is not a huge amount that can be written about episode two, for obvious reasons. Suffice to say that it takes the larger overarching mystery established at the end of episode one – which, in itself, is intriguing – and develops it in ways that suggests larger ramifications for the future of the Marvel Cinematic Universe. The ending of episode two is fairly shocking, and will likely result in some of the most perverse fan fiction the internet has ever seen.

It is, in many ways, the Marvel show that fans have been waiting for.

I want to fall in love,

to have the world stop

when I meet his eyes.

To put all of my trust in someone

and know that my heart rested safely in the hands of my lover.
I want to give my all
to someone
and receive that in return.
I want to be loved publicly and not in secret.
My love deserves to burn brightly,
not contained or hidden.
I want a love to overwhelm me like the blue ocean waves,
let the salt wash away the past.
I want to listen to love songs and let the words settle into my heart, knowing that I can understand every spoken word.
I want to dance in the rain
like no one is watching.
Let me kiss you in public and declare my love for everyone to see.
But let me love you in private with cuddles and soft words
only for you.
I want to fall in love.

June 10 Solar Eclipse in the Northern Hemisphere!

On June 10, people in parts of the northern hemisphere will have the chance to witness a solar eclipse.

> Watch the full visualization of the eclipse.

The June 10 eclipse is an annular solar eclipse, meaning that the Sun will never be completely covered by the Moon. The Moon's orbit around the Earth is not a perfect circle, so throughout each month, the Moon's distance from Earth varies. During an annular eclipse, the Moon is far enough away from Earth that the Moon appears smaller than the Sun in the sky. Since the Moon does not block the entire view of the Sun, it will look like a dark disk on top of a larger, bright disk. This creates what looks like a ring of fire around the Moon.

People in the narrow path of annularity — which, for this eclipse, cuts through Canada, Greenland, and northern Russia — will see the ring of fire effect as the Moon passes across the Sun.

> Credit: Dale Cruikshank

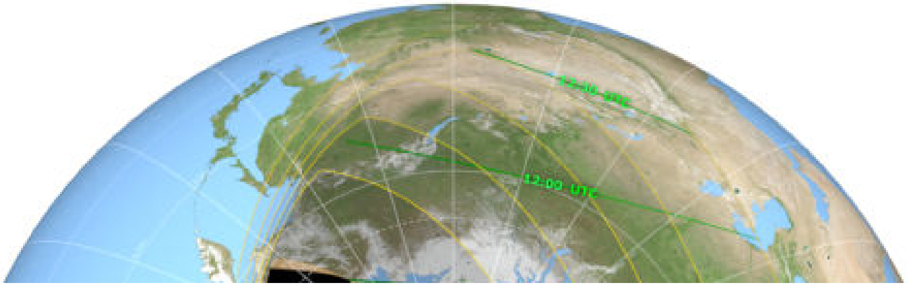
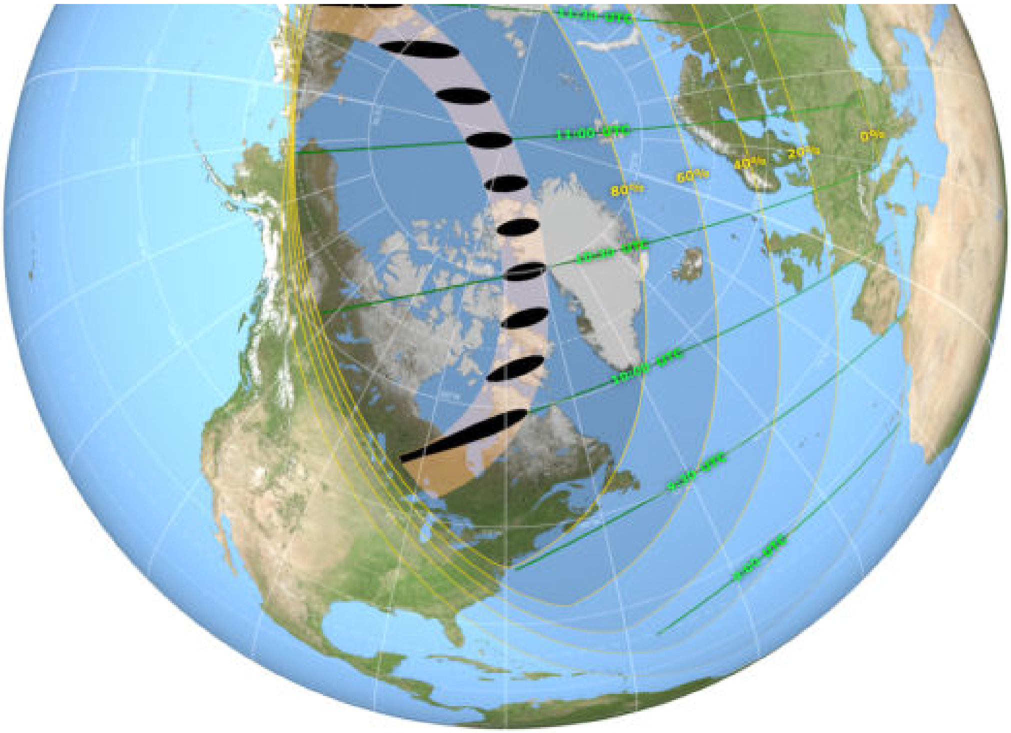
Outside this path of annularity, many people in the northern hemisphere have a chance to see a partial solar eclipse. The partial eclipse will fall on parts of the eastern United States, as well as northern Alaska. Some locations will only see a very small piece of the Sun covered, while locations closer to the path of annularity can see the Moon cover most of the Sun.

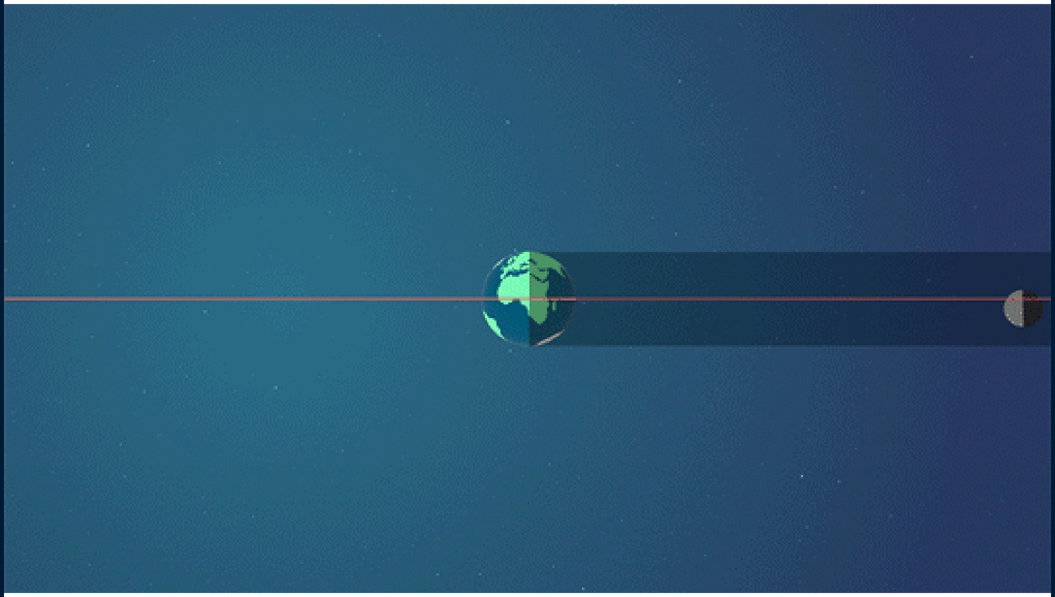
To learn which times the eclipse may be visible in certain areas, you can click anywhere on the map here. (Note that the maximum obscuration and maximum eclipse timing noted on this map may occur before sunrise in many locations.)





This solar eclipse is a pair with the total lunar eclipse that happened on May 26.

Both solar and lunar eclipses happen when the Sun, Moon, and Earth line up in the same plane — a lunar eclipse happens when Earth is in the middle and casts its shadow on the Moon, and a solar eclipse happens when the Moon is in the middle and casts its shadow on Earth. The Moon's orbit is tilted, so it's usually too high or too low for this alignment to work out.



The May 26 lunar eclipse was a supermoon lunar eclipse, meaning that the full moon happened while the Moon was near its closest point to Earth, making the Moon appear larger in the sky. The solar eclipse happens at the opposite point of the Moon's orbit, during the new moon — and in this case, the new moon happens near the Moon's farthest point from Earth, making the Moon appear smaller and resulting in an annular (rather than total) solar eclipse.

How to watch the eclipse

From anywhere: Watch the eclipse online with us! Weather permitting, we'll be sharing live telescope views of the partial eclipse courtesy of Luc Boulard of the Royal Astronomical Society of Canada Sudbury Centre. Tune in starting at 5 a.m. EDT on June 10 at nasa.gov/live.

From the path of the annular or partial eclipse: Be sure to take safety precuations if you plan to watch in person!

It is never safe to look directly at the Sun's rays, even if the Sun is partly or mostly obscured, like during a partial or annular eclipse — doing so can severely harm your eyes. If you're planning to watch the eclipse on June 10, you should use solar viewing glasses or an indirect viewing method at all points during the eclipse if you want to face the Sun. Solar viewing glasses, sometimes called eclipse glasses, are NOT regular sunglasses; regular sunglasses are not safe for viewing the Sun.

If you don't have solar viewing or eclipse glasses, you can use an alternate indirect method like a pinhole projector. Pinhole projectors shouldn't be used to look at the Sun; instead, they're an easy way to project an image of the Sun onto a surface. Read more about how to create a pinhole projector.

This is a sunrise eclipse in the contiguous U.S. At locations in the lower 48 states that can see the partial eclipse, the show starts before sunrise, when the Sun is still below the horizon. That means the best chance to see the eclipse in these locations will be during and shortly after sunrise, when the Sun is very low in the sky. In northern Alaska, the eclipse happens in the very early hours of June 10 when the Sun is low on the horizon.

Bottom line: If you're trying to watch the eclipse in the contiguous U.S., look for a location with a clear view of the horizon to the northeast, and plan to watch starting at sunrise with your solar filter or indirect viewer.

The next two eclipses in the continental U.S. are in 2023 and 2024. The annular solar eclipse of Oct. 14, 2023, will cut from Oregon to Texas, and the total solar eclipse of April 8, 2024, will pass from Texas to Maine. Keep up with the latest on eclipses and eclipse science at nasa.gov/eclipse.

- "the kingdom of god is within you because you ate it"
- "the blood in your mouth – I wish it was mine"
- "his mouth is heaven, his kisses falling over me like stars"
- "I am singing now while rome burns"
- "that corpse you planted last year in your garden, has it begun to sprout? will it bloom this year?"
- "so the gods sank to human shape with longing"
- "those imperial, disimpassion'd eyes"
- "this beautiful speed will be the end of us. those are stars in our teeth."
- "if love wants you, if you've been melted into stars"
- "out of the ash I rise with my red hair / and I eat men like air"

- “your body hurts me as the world hurts god”
- “lessons on loving a prophet”
- “and I, infinitesimal being, drunk with the great starry void”
- “tell me about despair, yours, and I will tell you mine”
- “to love a prophet is to become their desert”
- “the void rushing up to greet us in the absence of god”
